BACK-TO-WORK ORDER NEXT: ANDRAS

Posties Given Ultimatum

OTTAWA (CP) — The government warned leaders of the striking letter carriers union today to accept the contract proposal now on the bargaining table or face a legislated settlement by Parliament.

Treasury Board President Robert Andras told a news conference the government has no more money to offer and that cabinet is monitoring the effects of the rotating strikes on a day-to-day basis.

"There is no more money available for a settlement," Andras said. "The government is absolutely determined."

However, he said the 19,000-member Letter Carriers Union of Canada (LCUC) has not been given a deadline for settlement after which Parliament would be recalled.

Legislation would require an early recall of Parliament, now scheduled to return Oct. 10.

The joint news conference was held by Andras, who controls the government purse-strings, and Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne, to explain the government's restraint policy as the rotating strikes continued for the second day.

Union spokesman said 25 of 285 locals across the country now are off the job.

Both sides have agreed to a basic six-per-cent salary increase over an 18-month contract but disagree on the amount of a cost-of-living formula.

The union says it is entitled to an additional 19 cents an hour that was negotiated in the last contract but was later rolled back by the Anti-Inflation Board. The contract expired June 30.

The government says the additional 19 cents exceeds its policy of making public service settlements comparable to those in the private sector.

A letter carrier with three years' experience now earns $6.65 an hour.

The union has twice rejected the government's proposal to implement an interim settlement based on the last offer while the entire matter goes to binding arbitration.

"We want to make it absolutely clear that we have no more money," Andras said. "Clearly, this a a futile work stoppage."

Andras refused to be specific about how long the cabinet was prepared to allow the strikes to continue before taking action.

"No decision has been made yet but we're monitoring the situation and obviously we can't allow it to go on for any length of time," he said.

Union President Robert McGarry says the letter carriers are willing to bargain but that there is no point in further talks unless the government changes its offer.

"All we are looking for is that someone sit down to negotiate with us and at least show some movement at the table," he said in an interview after the news conference.

Cook's Impulsive Look Saves Tide-Trapped Pair

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

It was just after lunch when Rick Cooper, a cook for a Parks Canada crew working on the West Coast Trail, rose from a nap in a bunkhouse at Camper Bay 15 miles from Port Renfrew.

He walked a few steps from the bunkhouse, looked at rain-swollen Camper Creek and down towards the mouth 200 yards away.

That impulse to take some air saved the lives Thursday of two young women hikers who had become stranded on a rock and were within minutes of being swept out to sea by the rising tide.

Sydney Johnsen, 22, an X-ray technician, and Jill Kieffer, 23, a nurse, both from Sechelt, said it was the "will of God" that saved them.

Then on Friday, an hour before the still-shaken women were flown out by helicopter, they witnessed another near-tragedy . . . a hiker crossing Camper Creek was swept downstream and nearly drowned in the fast-moving water.

Brodie Harrington of Vancouver was crossing the creek with Ron Adams when he sank up to his armpits and was swept downstream. In desperation he grabbed a branch and pulled himself ashore . . . only 300 feet from the sea.

To Pacific Rim National Park superintendent Frank Camp a lot can be learned from the two incidents.

He said they show what can happen if people travel off the trail in bad weather, or attempt to cross swollen creeks where bridges have not been installed.

"They should stay put until the weather improves," he said.

For the women, both experienced hikers, all was beauty and joy along the trail until the weather suddenly deteriorated as they approached the south end.

They decided to leave the designated trail and walk to Camper Bay along sandstone shelves by the seaside —about 12 miles — a safe enough route if the tide is low but hazardous when high.

They weren't making good progress so they decided to walk along the bed of a small creek and rejoin the trail. But the salal was so thick, they were forced to retrace their steps.

"It got dark and it was raining," said Johnsen. "We decided to pitch our tent on a shelf, the sea only a few feet away. There was no other place. We soon found out we were in a pool of water. We just lay in our sodden sleeping bags. The next morning we rung them out like towels."

BIKER PROTEST A REAL SMASH

About 5,000 riders had taken part in the Friday night demonstration, gathering in Bastille Square in eastern Paris and then roaring for three hours up and down the Champs Elysees and other city thoroughfares.

The accident occurred on the city's ring beltway after the protest broke up and several hundred motorcyclists headed for the eastern suburbs. The cause of the pile-up is not immediately determined.

The demonstrators demanded that authorities take motorcycle safety into account in road planning and protested attacks on large-engined bikes by Road Safety Directer Christian Gerondeau following the deaths of five riders attending a motorcycle race last week.

Gerondeau suggested riders should have special permits to ride motorcycles with engines larger than 450 cubic centimetres.

"People who buy Ferraris don't need special permits," said demonstrator Paul Laurent, 22. "Why should a man who buys a 450cc bike be obliged to get one?"

United Way Takes Aim At $926,500

The United Way campaign this year hopes to hit the $926,500 mark.

Dave Cutler, place kicker for the Edmonton Eskimos, and Bob Mussett, this year's campaign chairman will start the drive by kicking off a giant weather balloon decorated with the United Way flag.

Also in attendance will be representatives from all 23 member agencies and the campaign cabinet.

Last year, the campaign achieved its goal and is confident this year's target, a 9 per cent increase over 1977, will also be met.

This year 10 executives on loan from Victoria businesses will be working full time in a bid to make sure the drive reaches its goal.

United Way is made up of volunteers who collect and then distribute money to local charitable institutions. More than 90 per cent of each dollar is paid out to member agencies.

In Victoria last year, $792,147 was distributed among member agencies and $51,674 used for year-round bookkeeping, agency relations and administration.

Last year, local contributions obtained 13,179 pints of blood for the Red Cross, provided services to handicapped children, helped senor citizens and the blind, delivered hot meals to the sick and made 3,000 physical and occupational therapy treatments available to multiple sclerosis sufferers.

United Way conducts only one annual campaign in the Greater Victoria area, replacing what would be 23 annual drives for funds if each member agency had to do it alone.

In return for a single donation on behalf of all its members, the United Way pledges to business concerns and individuals that no other solicitation will be made for operating funds by any of the member agencies.

Hero's Welcome For Sadat

CAIRO (AP) — President Anwar Sadat, carrying a promise of peace from the Camp David summit, returned to Egypt today to a tumultuous welcome hailing him as "the hero of peace."

Thousands of his countrymen, including the entire cabinet and all 360 members of parliament, greeted Sadat at Cairo airport in a reception organized by his National Democratic party.

Hundreds of thousands of others were expected to welcome Sadat later as he rode into the city itself.

Royal a 'Real Mess', Symphony Books UVic

Renovations to the Royal Theatre will not be finished in time for the opening concert of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra Oct. 1 — and the delay could eventually cost the municipally-owned building its main tenant.

Symphony personnel officer E.T. Hemingway said today the orchestra cheered when it was informed it would have to perform in University of Victoria's new concert hall instead.

"We (the symphony officers) were upset but the orchestra was happy. The acoustics are much superior in the university's new concert hall. I think the orchestra would prefer to play there on a permanent basis."

Hemingway said he and symphony president Jean Hunter were upset mainly because they were not informed about the delay at the Royal Theatre.

"I learned quite by accident. I met someone who was working on the project and he suggested Mrs. Hunter and I go down and take a look. It was a real mess."

(Mrs. Hunter said that when she walked into the Royal Theatre and saw the state of the stage and dressing rooms, "I just about had cardiac arrest.")

The symphony officials quickly arranged to switch the concert to UVic. The program, featuring four arias by Anna Moffo, will be held at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 1, and at 8 p.m. Monday, Oct. 2, at the new concert hall.

But the UVic hall might not be available for the second concert series, scheduled Oct. 15 and Oct. 16.

University auditorium manager David Titterton said the auditorium is already quite heavily booked for October and any other concerts for which the Royal is not available will have to be shifted to other days of the week from the traditional Sunday-Monday.

The Royal will not be available until Oct. 20.

Hemingway said symphony officials were upset mainly because they hadn't been warned about the trouble at the Royal and because of problems in making the switch to UVic.

"Many members have sat in a certain place for years and now we have to try to get

Soccer Fan Killed

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — A soccer fan was killed today as violence flared before an English League First Division match between Birmingham City and Chelsea.

The man, who was not named by police, died when pushed underneath a double decker bus.

The dead man was believed to be a Chelsea supporter.

At another match, between Third Division teams Brentford and Gillingham, fans fought a pitched battle on the terraces as police battled to keep them under control.

JABOUR WINS COURT ROUND

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal has unanimously upheld a B.C. Supreme Court order stopping the the B.C. Law Society from disciplining a North Vancouver lawyer for advertising.

The three appeal court judges ruled Friday that the case of lawyer Donald Jabour was of a unique and special nature and ordered the continuation of an injunction granted in May by Justice R. P. Anderson.

Jabour was found guilty by a special law society committee of conduct unbecoming a member of the law profession after he violated society rules and advertised a legal clinic he opened in North Vancouver last January.

The committee cited him for misconduct and recommended he be suspended for six months.

Jabour sued the society for damages, claiming the advertising ban was a breach of the Combines Investigation Act.

Justice Anderson set trial for Jabour's damage action against the society for November. Jabour has agreed not to advertise pending his court action.

SIN Abuse Appals Rights Boss

OTTAWA (CP) — Human Rights Commissioner Gordon Fairweather says Parliament will be asked to deal with alleged misuse of social insurance numbers.

Fairweather, speaking today in an interview taped for Standard Broadcast News, said information received by government for one purpose should not be used for another.

"But I tell you that I am appalled, and the Canadian Human Rights Commission is appalled if other departments of governments can hook into a computer which is programmed just on the social insurance number."

He said he has no objection to the use of the social insurance number for employment purposes or income tax purposes.

But, Fairweather added, his employment record should not be accessible to other government departments.

"So things that have nothing whatsoever to do with my income tax are splashed all over," Fariweather added.

He said the commission expects to discuss the issue of alleged social insurance number misuse with Parliament.

"We strongly condemn it, but we have to do more than that. We have to ask Parliament to deal with it."

RCMP officials earlier this summer testified before a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing that the social insurance number has developed into an identification card.

Following testimony about the relationship between the RCMP and the unemployment insurance commission, RCMP access to commission files were cut until the royal commission decides on the issue.

A senior RCMP official said the RCMP is going to challenge the unemployment insurance commission's view based on justice department's opinion that giving confidential data to police is illegal.

Arab Hawks Unite to Block Peace

Times News Services

Arab hawks today announced how they plan to bring President Anwar Sadat of Egypt to his knees and undermine accords on peace in the Middle East signed at Camp David, Md., last Sunday.

Their plan of action was drawn up in three days of discussions in Damascus by the leaders of the Front for Steadfastness and Confrontation. It groups Syria, Algeria, South Yemen, Lybia and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO).

Informed sources said Friday night the anti-Egyptian front has agreed on the formation of a joint political and military command for co-ordinated moves against Israel and Egypt after the Camp David accords worked out by U.S. President Carter, Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

The agreements are regarded by the front as a sellout of the Arabs and a total Egyptian surrender to U.S. and Israeli dictates.

The sources said a final document of the Damascus meeting also would include provisions for closer ties with the Soviet Union and increased military and economic support for Syria and the PLO, the nucleus of the front.

The resolutions are certain to make the mission of U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance in Damascus more difficult. Vance is scheduled to arrive in Damascus on Sunday after a 24-hour postponement at Syria's request.

In Amman today, King Hussein of Jordan warned of "very serious repercussions" if Egypt and Israel negotiate a separate treaty and said only substantial changes in the Camp David accord could persuade him to join the peace moves.

The king unleashed his sharpest criticism yet of Sadat but left open a possibility he might join the peace efforts without a public or written commitment by Israel to meet all Arab demands.

Israeli settlers in northern Sinai today blocked a road leading to their village in protest against the Camp David agreements that would probably lead to their eviction from the area.

Israel Radio said the settlers were allowing military vehicles through but civilians touring the area during the Sabbath day of rest were being turned back.

GET OUT, MAIR TELLS OTTAWA

The federal government should get out of the consumer protection field, says Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair.

"It's about time the federal government let the provinces and the regions do those things that they do best, and that particularly relates to the consumer field," the minister said Friday.

As things now stand, he said, the big loser is the consumer.

Mair said Ottawa insists on controlling the market place and then fails to enforce its own regulations.

No Night Shutdown Of Pat Bay Tower

Transport Minister Otto Lang has abandoned plans to close the Patricia Bay airport control tower during slack hours.

The proposal, which would have taken effect in 1979, was to get along without a traffic control officer from midnight to 7 a.m.

Similar cutbacks were ordered for airports at Dorval, Ottawa, Edmonton, Halifax, Moncton and St. John's.

Stephen Rybak, a spokesman for the transport ministry, said Lang has decided that Victoria will retain its overnight traffic control officer. The cutback at the six other airports is also under review, he said.

The plan had been criticized by Esquimalt-Saanich MP Don Munro who said there must be someone on duty in case of a landing emergency even in light traffic periods.

Without a traffic control officer, a pilot would be able to communicate only with a radio officer who could supply general information about ground conditions but could give no assistance with landing procedures.

Lang had expected to save $1 million per year by closing the control towers overnight at the seven airports.

He is continuing a study of ways to save money and may reduce emergency service crews at Sault Ste. Marie, Regina, Goose Bay, Yellowknife and Penticton.

Christians Blasted

BEIRUT (AP) — Syrian tanks, rockets and machine-guns blasted Christian militia positions in Beirut today and the militiamen retaliated with heavy machine-gun bursts. Police said six Lebanese were killed and 37 wounded.

Boys Find Baby

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Two boys returning home from school on Thursday investigated what they thought was the cry of a kitten and found an abandoned two-day-old baby beneath a sheet on the front porch of an empty house.

The child was safe and well in hospital today while police attempted to find his mother.

Evelyn Pastro, mother of Remo Sandro Pastro, 10, one of the boys who found the baby, said the boys wrapped the baby in the sheet and took him to her house.

Mrs. Pastro said she warmed up and diapered the baby.

"Once I'd warmed him up he stopped crying," she said.

Socred Doorstep Vote Bid?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett kept provincial election speculation alive in British Columbia Friday by saying the Social Credit party would conduct a door-to-door campaign to "listen to the people."

Bennett didn't say if the Doorstep '78 Campaign would be a party public-relations program or part of an election fight.

Bennett arrived here from Victoria Friday to attend a closed meeting with about 150 party constituency officials from across B.C. for a seminar on riding organization. There was no party comment later on what was discussed.

Meanwhile, the provincial human resources ministry was sending welfare recipients a new pamphlet that mentions the Social Credit party's reduction in sales tax to five from seven per cent.

NEW METHOD ENDS SMOKING FOR LIFE

RESEARCHED AT U.B.C.

Recently published results of research at U.B.C. report on a new, simple, pleasant way to end smoking permanently. Proven effective for even heavy smokers, smoking can be ended easily in just 24 hours without drugs, discomfort or weight gain. The new method now available in Victoria is called R.E.S.T. (Reduced Environmental Stimulation Technique). Private, personalized and professionally supervised, it can be used in your own home. 75% to 95% of the smokers who tried R.E.S.T. quit successfully. If you want to stop smoking, or if your doctor has told you to stop, phone now for free information or an appointment. Results are guaranteed.

Boy runs past corpse in Esteli where national guard says it 'suffocated' resistance.

Esteli: A Stench of Death

ESTELI, Nicaragua (AP) — "The guard airplanes would bomb, then rocket and shoot at our homes," a near hysterical woman said as she fled Esteli.

"I have a horror of it. Esteli will never be the same. I want to go to Costa Rica. It's the safest country in Central America, isn't it?" she asked a reporter.

The woman, who declined to give her name, begged two of her sons not to go back into the city to retrieve cars.

"I don't ever want to go back," she said. "Please, my loves, don't go." They went anyway.

Inside the city, two twisted and charred bodies lay in a debris-strewn street Friday, hours after President Anastasio Somoza's National Guard recaptured the town, snuffing out the last member of a two-week uprising.

"We are burning the corpses," a Red Cross worker said through a mask worn to ward off the stench from bodies scattered throughout this town of 35,000 about 124 kilometres north of Managua.

"There are at least 400 persons dead here and that's an estimate based on the bodies we have seen," the worker said. "But many bodies will never be found. They were buried by relatives in backyards or obliterated by guard bombings."

Many buildings lay in ruins, some with only walls standing after being bombed by National Guard troops to root out guerrillas.

Chest-high barricades stood intact on almost all streets leading into the centre of the city. They were made of concrete building blocks, cobblestones torn from the streets and huge piles of dirt. Some were surrounded by trenches.

One street where some of the heaviest fighting occurred was littered with broken glass, spent rifle cartridges and twisted tree limbs.

The bars gave way and two youths grabbed shiny new machetes and strutted off with them. A man bent almost double by a gas stove on his back plodded across the main highway, stopping every few feet to rest. A woman carried a new baby crib on her back.

Outside the city, two columns of about 150 troops marched casually up the highway. They were calm and friendly.

But further down the road a sullen group of guardsmen stood around their command centre, surrounded by armored cars and Jeeps mounting .50-calibre machine-guns.

One guardsmen said they were preparing a common grave for the dead in the city. He declined to say how many soldiers were killed.

"Tell the world the truth, please," the man said. "We have suffered a bloody bombardment from the guard. Tell them we don't want Somoza any more."

OAS Proposal Watered Down

WASHINGTON (WP) — A U.S. call for the Organization of American States to step into the Nicaraguan civil war and investigate allegations of atrocities there ran into stiff opposition Friday from Latin America's conservative military regimes.

At a special foreign-minister-level OAS meeting to discuss the Nicaragua situation, delegates from several military-dominated governments attacked the U.S. proposal as a violation of the OAS charter's prohibition against intervening in the affairs of any hemispheric country.

The main points of the U.S. proposal, presented to the OAS Thursday night as a resolution, called for sending the OAS human rights commission to Nicaragua to probe the atrocity charges and for OAS member countries to be prepared to act as mediators in the conflict between Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza and his domestic opponents.

However, most of the military governments in the 25-member OAS appeared to be rallying instead round a resolution offered by El Salvador. It called for humanitarian aid to the victims of the Nicaraguan bloodshed but ruled out any political action by the OAS in that Central American country.

In an effort to resolve the impasse, the meeting appointed a working group to seek a compromise acceptable to both sides. The negotiators, who were working late into the night, were instructed to report to a formal session of the meeting scheduled today.

However, as of Friday night, diplomatic sources were pessimistic that a compromise resolution capable of gaining the 17 votes needed for passage could be achieved.

Out There

There may be a million other worlds out there in the universe with conditions favorable enough to have developed civilizations similar to those on planet Earth, according to astronomer Carl Sagan, an American scientist who is closely involved with the search for extraterrestrial intelligence.

This hunt has been carried on sporadically by radiotelescopes, big dish-shaped antennae — some of them measured in miles. As Sagan puts it, in only the last one-millionth of man's existence on the planet has he invented the equipment which for the first time enables communication with "unimaginably distant civilizations."

Scientists working in this area have attempted to estimate how many advanced civilizations — those which may have developed equally-modern radio astronomy techniques — there may be in the Milky Way, the galaxy in which our own solar system is located. The number which they have come up with, by assigning different numerical values to what man knows already about the number of other suns out there, the possibilities of planets revolving around them and the odds on intelligent life being on some of them, Sagan says is about a million.

"That is a breathtakingly large number, and it is exhilarating to imagine the diversity, lifetyles and commerce of those million worlds," he writes in a recent issue of the Smithsonian magazine. But the catch is that those million are scattered among probably 250 billion other lifeless stars, and they cannot be identified except by a wide examination. Radio astronomy will be the scattergun tool employed.

It is relatively inexpensive and radio signals travel at the speed of light, 186,000 miles per second. "And the use of radio for communication is not an anthropocentric activity," meaning it is not limited to man on earth. Radio waves are a large part of the electromagnetic spectrum, and they pour out of many parts of the universe.

"Any technical civilization anywhere in the galaxy will have discovered radio, just as we have."

Only in 1959 was the first serious atempt made to receive radio signals emanating from out there, says Sagan. Project Ozma beamed in on two relatively close stars, Epsilon Eridani and Tau Ceti, for a few weeks but heard nothing. Which is not surprising, since even the most optimistic estimate of possible civilized worlds means examining a few hundred thousand stars to winnow out the one or two that may be trying to communicate with other planets.

Since that modest start, there have been a few other similar searches — in all about 1,000 stars have been examined. Sagan notes: "We have performed something like one-tenth of one per cent of the required effort."

But the astronomer states that there are indications that more serious and intensive efforts may be on the way soon. All previous attempts have been made using only small amounts of time on large radio telescopes or longer periods on small telescopes. A study for NASA by an MIT professor has called for a sustained effort on a large radio telescope, suggesting that the dividends to be reaped from such an approach would be great.

The greatest drawback to attempts at interstellar communication, however, are the immense distances involved, even accounting for the blinding speed of radio waves. Supposing a million technical civilizations in the Milky Way galaxy means an average distance between them of 300 light years. A message beamed between them would take 300 years to arrive — forget about waiting around for an answer. This rate of movement makes even the Canadian post office look good.

"Interstellar monologues" are what radio astronomy probes will be called. Why bother if there is little chance of getting a reply within our lifetimes — or our great-grandchildren's for that matter? "It might seem remarkably selfless for a civilization to broadcast radio messages with no hope of knowing, at least in the immediate future, whether they have been received and what the response to them might be.

"But human beings often perform very similar actions — as, for example, in burying time capsules to be recovered by future generations, or even in wrtiting books, composing music and creating art intended for posterity. A civilization which had been aided by the receipt of such a message in its past might wish to similarly benefit other emerging technical societies."

What sort of message would we send out? Sagan suggests a simple one: the first 12 prime numbers (1, 2, 3, 5, 7, 11, 13, 17, 19, 23, 29, 31), which are numbers divisible only by one and themselves. Or pictures could be transmitted, using binary computer transmission methods — just a series of ones and zeroes in a pattern which translates into a photograph. The television pictures taken by robot satellites on the moon and Mars were transmitted to Earth in this fashion.

The implications of possibly communicating with other civilizations in the universe are mind-boggling; it is truly a "space" project but one that will not cost billions upon billions. Truly incomprehensible results loom somewhere ahead.

Shakespearean Tragedy Played on B.C. Stage

In the past week politicians, journalists and the public alike have referred to the "tragedy" of Jack Davis. In most cases they have used the word in its most general, popular meaning of "sad event, calamity, serious accident or crime" (Concise Oxford Dictionary).

But the analogy could probably be taken farther than that. Davis would not do badly as a hero of a Shakespearean tragedy — the man who is basically a good and strong person but who is destroyed by a single fatal flaw in his character.

When the first classic tragedies were written in ancient Greece, their theme was usually that of a man caught in the clutch of circumstances and eventually destroyed by forces of fate which he could not escape. When Shakespeare adapted the form, however, he recognized that the much more common tragedy — and in some ways the much more painful one — was that of the person caught in the clutch of his own human weaknesses and failings and eventually destroyed by his own behavior and actions.

Thus it is with Davis.

He has a brilliant mind, surely one of the best in either the B.C. cabinet or the federal cabinet where he served before. He has more than his share of the traditional Protestant virtues of hard work, dedication and devotion to duty. He had an uncanny ability to keep in mind the myriad complex details of the most complicated parts of his portfolio — B.C. Hydro's energy demand forecasts, for example, or the manning schedule of the B.C. ferries.

With such talents he should surely have been one of the top cabinet ministers, federal or provincial, and a true political star on the B.C. scene. Yet he never came really close to realizing that potential: his career was checkered at best; in the 1974 federal campaign Prime Minister Trudeau stated while in Vancouver that Davis's dual portfolio (fisheries and the environment) would be split if the Liberals won, hardly the sort of statement designed to help an incumbent running for re-election; in that same campaign, Davis was the only cabinet minister defeated as the Trudeau Liberals roared back to victory. In the provincial arena, Premier Bill Bennett took responsibility for the ferry system away from Davis, obviously in part because the ferries were becoming such a mess.

And finally there were only black squares left on the checkerboard when Davis was convicted of criminal fraud resulting from the downgrading of airline tickets and pocketing of the resulting refunds.

It is difficult to find a single word to describe Davis's weakness that led to such ignominy. Perhaps the best word would be blindness — in all his years as an elected official he was never able to see the most basic realities about politics, about the way the political system worked, about the demands of public life.

It was, in its own way, amazing. The man who could understand every aspect of the most technical energy problems could never understand the simplest aspect of politics — like why it was not a good idea to say publicly the opposite of what the premier said, or why some tact was necessary in telling ferry employees that a large number of them were about to be laid off, or why some care should be exercised in offering your home riding a political plum.

He made premiers and prime ministers nervous because they never knew what he might say next — not meaning to do the government any harm but not able to see in advance what the public reaction might be to his statements.

Neither, it is obvious, did he see in advance the consequences of the airplane ticket refunds. Without going into the details, since an appeal is planned, it is sufficient only to say that Davis was genuinely bewildered at the furore that resulted. He had never seen it that way.

In the end, however, it is still reasonable to hope that the end of the Davis story is more optimistic than the endings of the Shakespearean tragedies. Although his political destruction now seems relatively complete, there is yet a good chance that he may pick up the remains of his life and become again a useful — perhaps even a happy — member of society, this time in a field where blindness is not such a fatal defect. — B.McL.

MAURICE WESTERN

Study Canada's Past, Otto

OTTAWA — Otto Lang, according to a report in The Globe and Mail, has ordered a departmental study of the implications for the parliamentary system of the introduction of instruments of direct democracy.

The move appears appropriate and prudent since Lang has been identified by the prime minister as the cabinet pioneer in this field.

In his recent comments on the subject, Trudeau made a number of references to procedures in other countries such as Switzerland and the United States. But Canadian experience, long forgotten by the politicians, would appear even more relevant. The inquiry should also be attractive to officials since the work has already been well done by political scientists.

Before going into this, it may be as well to make a preliminary point. This is that the line between "direct" and "indirect" democracy is considerably hazier than the current discussion seems to assume.

Shopping for Ideas

The most commonly mentioned instruments of direct democracy are popular initiative, referendums and recall. They were embraced with great enthusiasm by the American populist movement in the last century and in the course of time were adopted by 20 states. As Trudeau has explained, they permit decision-making to be transferred from elected representatives to people at large.

It is true that our system makes no formal provision for such procedures. Legislation does not flow from popular initiatives; it originates with the government and is passed by Parliament. But this does not mean that ideas necessarily originate with the politicians. They go shopping for them as Pearson did at the celebrated Kingston conference and as Stanfield did later at a gathering in Niagara Falls which included so many "resource personnel" that practising Conservatives were almost lost in the crowd.

Consider, for example, the case of lotteries. The political parties had little if anything, to do with the original agitation, which was inspired partly by the success of the Irish sweepstakes and partly by the unsatisfied needs of hospitals, sports and other organizations. In the end the Liberal government, with the Olympics in mind, decided that the time of the lottery idea had come. As the reaction of the provinces swiftly demonstrated, lotteries also accorded admirably with the principles of the other parties.

But direct democracy in Canada is not exactly new. It was imported into Alberta nearly 60 years ago, led a somewhat fitful life and expired in the 1930s. Its original sponsor, the most influential Albertan of his day, was Henry Wise Wood, head of the UFA. In his mind the party system and the conventions of responsible parliamentary government were means used to divide and frustrate the people. His solution was group government with members answerable, at least in the beginning, to the constituency farm organizations.

In practice (and this was what mattered since the UFA tended to be a bit neglectful of legislation), Wood's theories created grave difficulties for the government which he fathered. With members voting as they chose, or as they read the minds of their locals, ministers seldom knew where they stood on if they would survive. In consequence, a retreat to less direct democracy became essential.

OTTO LANG
. . . cabinet referendum specialist

Nevertheless, the platform included "the principle of the initiative, referendum and recall" and there was an impressive practical application in 1925. The UFA members, having decided that the performance of their leader was unsatisfactory, advised Herbert Greenfield, in effect, that they were recalling him. John Brownlee, in these circumstances, became a somewhat reluctant successor; yielding to persuasion only when Wood had been brought in to offer the needed assurances.

Such precedents, naturally, will appeal more to some than to others, especially in Ottawa nowadays.

Various questions, notably relating to liquor, have been put to the referendum test by provincial governments. Even if a jurisdictional problem did not exist, however, it is not clear that the method would be appropriate federally.

On such matters, attitudes vary widely from region to region. Quebec never did succumb to prohibition. Prince Edward Island later became the last dry stronghold. What would have been the impact on unity if the question had been settled by national referendum? No doubt, the island would have been drenched by Quebec votes. At an earlier stage, however, Quebecers might well have endured a deprivation resulting perhaps from the votes of those who followed the anti-booze crusaders of the temporarily emancipated West.

In the case of the wartime plebiscite, we do not have to speculate about might have beens. It is a matter of record that English Canada went heavily in one direction; Quebec emphatically in the other. Out of direct democracy came the subsequent national crisis.

Got a Bit Too Close

When Social Credit achieved power in Alberta, the tentative UFA experiment was carried a bit farther. Although the Aberhart campaign generated great enthusiasm, there were lingering doubts among those to whom the A plus B theorem sounded rather too good to be true. Aberhart, accordingly, coupled his appeal for a full mandate with a promise to institute recall legislation. In April, 1936 legislation was duly passed.

Unfortunately, disappointments followed. In those days people did not have the save-or-spend dilemma of Chretien's speeches since there was no money for either. They accordingly developed a very keen interest in their dividends, which failed to arrive.

Recall petitions, inspired by the teachings of direct democracy, began to circulate in Aberhart's constituency. They aroused a natural concern, leading the government caucus to suspect a flaw in the theory. Accordingly, the legislation was repealed in October, 1937. What is more, it was repealed retroactively to the date of enactment. For direct democracy, that was the end of the road.

We seem now to be a world removed from the much simpler prairie society of those days. To some it may appear rather strange that guidance should be sought in 1978 from the unworkable ideas which led to the experiences of a half century ago.

Even so, Lang has probably acted wisely in bizarre circumstances. Study is usually commendable; it should in this case prove fascinating to the officials and is much less expensive than many other activities in which governments engage.

Bark for Dinner

Recently, while shopping for a dog, I visited Victoria's SPCA — Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. I wished to adopt a female puppy and am certainly not griping about the standard fee ($55) which covered the spaying of the animal. Nor do I complain about the protocol, requiring approval of the adoption by the kennel master. In theory, the care and attention in determining a suitable home for any animal is certanly admirable, and I do not wish to slight the society's efforts in this direction.

However, in regards to a suitable home, surely a one-acre lot in Central Saanich is infinitely preferable to a six-foot plot? Apparently not. Not only was I told a one-acre lot would be insufficient, I was as much as informed that I didn't need a dog as I already had one! (The purpose of my search was to provide a playmate for this animal in fact).

The rudeness and total lack of concern in the attendant's manner was deplorable. I wonder if there are other Victorians who have been treated in such a discourteous manner. Perhaps the attendant concerned should learn to bark for his dinner. — Edie Jordan, Victoria.

Tales of the Sea

The people of Canada's Atlantic and Pacific coasts have traditionally been very close to and dependent on the sea and have, I am sure, many intriguing stories to tell. It is unfortunate that many of these experiences have never been recorded and may be lost forever.

I am very interested in recording these memories. If any of your readers have recollections of shipwrecks, daring rescues, devastating storms, successful voyages, disastrous voyages, rumrunning, the salmon fishery, beachcombing, the early days of radar, lighthouse keeping — indeed, anything related to the sea — I would be delighted to hear from them. Happy, sad, funny memories, I want to hear them all.

I shall assume that any items submitted to me are intended for possible publication, either as is or after editing, without further permission being necessary. Of course, I cannot guarantee publication of all submissions. — Calvin Coish, 10E St. Catherine St., Grand Falls, Newfoundland, A2A 1V8.

Not A Duplicate

I read with interest Tom Sellgren's letter (Need Competition) in the Times on Sept. 8, with reference to the program schedule of CHEK television.

In view of the fact that the CBC has decided not to sign on their television station in Victoria, we must maintain as a condition of our CRTC license the CBC affiliation.

However, we have made an agreement with them to carry only the Canadian and essential sections of their program schedule and as a result of this, we have put together 82 hours and 40 minutes per week of separate programming — separate from BCTV here in Vancouver and separate from the CBC. This is more than 54 per cent of the program schedule of 154 hours a week.

With reference to his point concerning competition, CHEK in Victoria has more competition than exists in cities like Los Angeles or New York. There are 12 stations on the dial in Victoria and only eight in Los Angeles and New York. I find it continually surprising that CHEK has the image of being simply a duplication of CTV and CBC programming. This is simply not true. — J. R. Peters, President, British Columbia Television.

After You, Charles

On returning home from an absence of some weeks, I find my mail contains a letter from MLA Charles Barber, from which I quote: "I'm absolutely intrigued by the correspondence we seem to have been carrying on in the last several months, and would very much appreciate an opportunity to meet you personally in order to add some human touch to our written dialogue." The letter also includes an invitation to lunch.

To recap: Mr. Barber attacked Mr. Vander Zalm on his budget figures for the Department of human resources; Mr. Vander Zalm, who is quite capable of defending himself and his policies, replied; however, as an interested party I became involved and eventually challenged Mr. Barber to submit for public scrutiny his figures for expenditure of the department of human resources and substantiate this expenditure by explaining where he would obtain the funds to support his budget. In games of this sort it is nice to see all the cards on the table.

Possibly my challenge and the growing public awareness and antagonism of massive government expenditures has caused some soul searching on the part of Mr. Barber and his associates; consequently I am sure no public acceptance of the challenge will be forthcoming.

I was also favored with Mr. Barber's press release and letter to the provincial premiers concerning the grievous position retired British citizens find themselves in as a result of the government of Great Britain having frozen their pensions.

It is questionable what reaction we can expect from the provincial premiers as no doubt they may consider his letter a contrived political ploy to get news coverage by badgering them with a federal responsibility, a better idea possibly would have been to ask the Canadian trade union leaders to contact their counterparts in Britain and request they pressure their government to take some form of remedial action.

This approach would have demonstrated sincerity of motive and been worthy of praise.

It is no doubt an embarrassment to those recipients of British pensions but presumably where and when necessary any financial slack is taken up by the social services in Canada.

Did Mr. Barrett have this problem on his agenda during his recent trip to Britain or was he merely emulating the satirical Don Quixote jousting at windmills? — K. R. Burns, 401-640 Dallas Road.

Washington Can't Afford To Ignore Nicaragua

By TAD SZULC
Manchester Guardian

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration, which has been fumbling all along in its handling of the Nicaraguan crisis, now faces the danger of being trapped by President Anastasio Somoza into believing that his dictatorship is the only alternative to a Communist takeover. To make the United States — eternally scared of Latin American revolutionary movements — accept Somoza's "After me the deluge" thesis is, of course, the heart of Somoza's strategy in his last-ditch battle against the ever-growing opposiiton in Nicaragua.

What is astounding, however, is the degree of political paralysis in which the U.S. administration now finds itself after all the errors of the recent past — instead of being able to move ahead with somewhat imaginative initiatives to find a plausible solution to the deepening crisis.

At the rate this situation is developing, the chances are that, indeed, Somoza's prophecies could become self-fulfilling, plunging Nicaragua into total repression carried out by his American-equipped National Guard in the environment of a full-fledged civil war. And such a state of affairs might, in the end, even lead to a takeover by the revolutinary Sandinista National Liberation Front (FSLN), acting alone or in conjunction with other anti-Somoza forces.

The urgent need, therefore, is to avoid further tragedy and bloodshed in Nicaragua. U.S. leadership is desperately required in an endeavor of this kind. It should also be added that the outcome in Nicaragua is certain to effect, in ways that are unpredictable, the situations in Guatemala, El Salvador, and Honduras, where guerrilla activities against local military regimes are again picking up steam, and even in Panama, ridden with new political uncertainties.

Growing Political Tumult

The truth is that except for Costa Rica (and even in that traditionally stable democracy there are first signs of unrest) all of Central America is in a state of major turmoil, a matter of open concern to the United States. Likewise Colombia, the South American democracy next door to Panama, now lives in growing political tumult.

Still, Nicaragua is today the key to the Central American drama and this is why the United States' role is so crucial. Up to now, however, the Carter administration has failed to demonstrate leadership.

Essentially, the administration seems to have hoped that Somoza would gradually lessen the rigidity of his dictatorship and allow a transition to democracy when the term to which he was elected in 1974 expires in 1981. It was foolish hope inasmuch as not only the Sandinista guerrillas, operating against the regime since 1961, but also the Nicaraguan business community have been up in arms against Somoza in ever-rising activity all this year. To most Nicaraguans, it seems clear that Somoza — whose father set up the family dictatorship 41 years ago — must go as soon as possible.

But incredibly, the administration failed to understand this fact. Last spring, bowing to a small but influential pro-Somoza lobby in Congress, it released aid funds to Nicaragua which had been stopped under Carter's own human rights policy. Shortly afterwards, Somoza met secretly with a ranking state department official in New York, returning to Managua evidently convinced that the United States would stand by him out of fear of a Cuban-type revolution. As Nicaraguan opposition leaders later said, Somoza became more menacing than ever to his enemies, including the moderates.

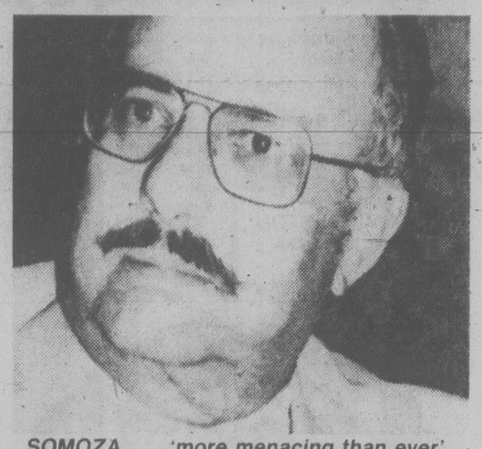
On August 1, Carter himself dispatched a letter to Somoza praising him for agreeing to an inspection visit by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, apparently part of the deal struck in New York. That Somoza had agreed to this visit was mildly encouraging, but even the state department was aghast when Carter — inexplicably — decided to bestow open praise on the dictator in the midst of generalized commercial strikes by the opposition.

The immediate reaction to the Carter letter was the decision by the guerrilla command to launch a raid on Aug. 22 on the National Palace in Managua, trapping nearly 2,000 persons inside along with 65 hostages of the Somoza establishment. The commandos were ready to execute the hostages if their demands, including the release of imprisoned Sandinista chiefs and guerrillas, were not met. The Sandinistas had concluded that the Carter letter confirmed their suspicions of unflagging American support for Somoza and that the time had come for spectacular actions.

The palace raid triggered a new wave of anti-Somoza violence and widespread strikes, but the best the United States could offer had the effect of antagonizing Nicaraguans even further; they and other Latin Americans read it as another from of U.S. support for the embattled dictator.

As for Somoza, he moved to denounce publicly senior officials as Marxists, and to make clear that Carter could choose between three more years of his rule or Communism under the Sandinista banner. To make this blackmail more credible, he ordered the arrest of 700 opposition members, ranging from suspected guerrillas to business executives.

The opinion of key democratic leaders in Latin America . . . is that the United States and the Organization of of American States must now move to stabilize the situation . . . (by arranging to have) an inter-American peacekeeping force dispatched to Nicaragua to stop the violence and, if possible, to assure a peaceful transition from the Somoza dictatorship to democratic rule.



SOMOZA . . . 'more menacing than ever'

Cornflake Boxes Do Not Conspiracy Make

By JONATHAN MANTHORPE
Toronto Star

Out in Regina at the premiers' conference last month, a group of reporters for French news outlets went to see a performance of John Coulter's play The Trial of Louis Riel.

They went bubbling with all they had heard about Riel from their tender years and believing that the play would be a celebration of their culture.

When they returned there was a subdued air in the group. They had found that the story of the final episode of the Riel rebellion had little to do with the ancient divisions between English and French Canadians and that Riel was a dubious hero for the resurgent nationalism of Quebec.

Which little story illustrates, after a fashion, that we are all victims of history.

The problem with history is that too many people believe in it.

The Alliance for the Preservation of English in Canada believes in history, as they showed . . . in a presentation to a legislative committee considering a private members bill which would make French an official language in Ontario.

These committee hearings are simply a forum for the airing of views. Premier William Davis has already said the bill will not become law.

RIEL . . . 'a dubious hero'

The alliance, with a selective grasp of history and not much else, contends that French was never intended to be an official language in Canada. They contend that there has been and remains a conspiracy to turn Ontario into a French-speaking Roman Catholic province . . . .

The alliance says, "The focal point of the leadership of the conspiracy has shifted to the federal cabinet, controlled by a French-speaking element who use the taxpayers' money to accomplish their ends."

Such guff should be a source of sadness rather than anger were it not dangerous guff.

"The politicians of today are so far removed from the grass roots that they cannot see that their actions are sowing the seeds of civil war in this province and indeed in this country," said the brief.

The alliance equates the granting of services in French to Franco-Ontarians to the "appeasement" of the Nazis in the 1930s. The clear inference is that the more French Canadians are given the more they will want, until every cornflake box from Bonavista to Vancouver Island is pristine Gallic.

It is all bunk and a selective reading of history to try to justify a tawdry and small-minded incitement. History is a catalogue of small victories for humanity and a multitude of errors.

To use history to try to prove dark motivations for an entire segment of society is evil.

The only value history has in this stage of the Canadian story is to help us try to understand how we came to this strange situation of having a large minority in the country functioning almost entirely separate from the mainstream.

In dealing with that situation we are on our own. History has nothing to tell us. If we try to deal with the present reality in terms of whether the Fathers of Confederation intended French to have any official status, we have already failed.

There is no doubt that history has not dealt Canadians an easy hand to play, but you don't get anywhere by squealing that you don't like your cards.

In this it is worth considering that French Canadians are just as much victims as are English-speaking Canadians.

Deep Frustrations

Over the past two years in Quebec we have seen a government come to power with the belief that independence would cure the deep frustrations of that province. The government has now largely moved away from that position as a careful study from the position of power showed it the dangers of separation.

We are approaching a time when some just resolution of the problems handed us by past generations can be found. All that the inane babblings of the Alliance for the Preservation of English in Canada can ensure is that we hand on the problem to our children.

Curious? Let's Just Say Nutty!

LONDON — Brobdingnag, where Gulliver on his travels found the giants, is north of California on the American West Coast.

California itself is an island, since "the Kingdom of California is separated from the provinces of New Mexico by the Mediterranean Sea of California."

That is, those things are true if you believe the maps currently on display at the British Museum. Luckily you can't believe a one.

The 86 funny and colorful maps in a British Library exhibition are anything but accurate guides to the lay of the land. The show is called Cartographical Curiosities, but a simpler way of saying it might be to call them nutty maps.

There is Lewis Carroll's Ocean Chart, a map which took none of his time away from Alice in Wonderland since it's a completely blank rectangle.

There are maps as jigsaw puzzles, as board games, as playing cards. One map is drawn on a whale's tooth, another on a paper-knife, another a globe made into a hot air balloon. There's a map of the Garden of Eden first drawn in 1109.

The map of Brobdingnag, published with Jonathan Swift's tale of Gulliver's Travels in 1726. The mythical country is shown as a fist-shaped blob protruding from North America to the north of the Monterey peninsula and Cape Mendocino.

California drawn as an island is another matter — not a literary conceit but a fixed belief.

In the 16th century lower California was mapped correctly as a peninsula, but in the 17th and early 18th centuries map-makers began drawing it as an island.

Cartographical Curiosities was organized to draw attention to some of the more unusual maps in the British Library, and every conceivable variety is on display.

One is a floor plan of St. James's Palace in London, published in 1689 to support the wild theory of "The Warming-Pan Baby." This raging controversy maintained that England's queen had given birth to a stillborn Prince of Wales and a substitute baby was smuggled in, carried in a warming pan, to replace him.

One large section of the show is taken up with moral or instructive maps. One was designed as virulently anti-Catholic propaganda, many others to make political points.

Rasping Call Signal Terns' Dinner Spied

It usually happens on a day in mid-September. The kind of day doesn't seem to matter. It can be bright and sunny, cloudy and wet, warm or cool, windy or calm; the only consistent essentials seem to be the sea and the terns.

It can happen just about anywhere along the waterfront — Ogden Point, Clover Point, Oak Bay, Cattle Point or Ten Mile Point — but, wherever, it always starts with the terns.

Often, before it happens, the terns will go unnoticed as they quietly course back and forth over the water in their search for little fish. On the other hand, if I should happen to notice them first, I'll ponder their dazzling grace in the air and the apparent ease with which they catch fish — plummeting into the water and seizing their prey in their beak.

The terns often work in groups and, when a little school of fish is found, their diving usually attracts other fish-eating birds which partake their own portions of the repast so nicely revealed to them.

But, usually without warning, the activity of the terns attracts another, less-welcome participant whose arrival is marked by a sharp, nasal cry and by the sight of a large, dark, gull-like bird close on the tail of a tern.

Jaeger!

I may be alone when I see one of these birds, but seldom — alone or otherwise — can I contain a jubilant shout. Jaeger! The hunter! There is something about these bold, dashing, buccaneers of the north that makes my spirits soar, stirs my imagination and sets my heart to pounding, and which makes September and the passage of the Common Terns an event I look forward to with growing anticipation each year.

Of the three kinds of jaeger which frequent our coasts — the Long-tailed, Pomarine and Parasitic jaegers — only the last can be considered common and only then, in early autumn, when the terns are heading south.

While a jaeger is quite capable of overtaking and capturing a small bird like a phalarope or a sandpiper in open flight, they are most often seen in our waters, chasing the terns. They'll stand off from a group of terns, waiting for one to catch a fish, then dash in and literally outfly one of the best flyers in the world, forcing it to give up its catch and often plunging, in a seemingly reckless display of aerial manoeuverability, to catch the fish in mid-air.

It is this chase I look forward to seeing each autumn for when a jaeger drops in behind a tern with a fish, the most exciting display of aerobatics takes place with the tern using all the manoeuverability in its power to dive, dart, twist and soar in an effort to shake its pursuer — which is all-the-while hardly a bird's length behind it.

The outcomes of such chases are almost invariably the same, the tern gives up its prey and the jaeger retrieves it. The loss does not deter the tern which usually resumes its fishing and often quickly has another in the "creel."

From a purely human, moralistic point of view, jaegers may not be the most reputable characters in the bird world but as efficient aerial, killing machines they are unsurpassed. Combining, as they do, the grace and agility of a gull and the speed and power of a falcon, jaegers display a formidable array of power before which most birds give way.

But it is the often unexpected nature of the jaeger's appearance that attracts me. There are days in September when I can walk the waterfront and only occasionally pick a jaeger out of the dozens of gulls over the water. Then there are other days when, without looking up, I know a jaeger is there and a pursuit has begun by the rasping call of the hunter as he launches his attack.

Turning to watch, my admiration for the hunter is often tinged with concern for the hunted, which I usually shrug off with "that's life." Harder to shrug off is the paradox that finds me admiring in a wild bird what I detest in a human being. And "that's life."

Kaleidoscope Earns International Spot

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

When do you altogether stop being a child?

Some astute people say never, up to and including second childhood. There is lurking inside most of us a remembered self that responds with delight to certain childish things. Particularly those things that display imaginative, innocently primitive and humorous concepts.

That is why the sort of thing that Kaleidoscope Theatre offers for the joy and information of the young, is equally enchanting to adult members — those who are capable parents and teachers — among their audiences. Someone once said something about childhood being wasted on children. It's a comment that comes to mind when one is experiencing a Kaleidoscope production.

Victoria's Kaleidoscope is a fully professional company that has achieved an international reputation as one of the top children's theatres in this country. In fact, ASSITEJ, a world organization for children's theatre has selected Kaleidoscope to represent Canada in April at a children's theatre festival in Wales, marking UNESCO's "Year of the Child" (1979).

With a totally new company under the artistic direction of Elizabeth Gorrie, a tight rehearsal schedule is now under way in preparation for the 1978-79 season which will premiere in town for a few weeks, starting at Richmond Elementary School Oct. 10.

The new company consists of five versatile young performers chosen by Liz Gorrie in auditions across the country. There is Kate Gentles of Edmonton, Rene Baillargeon of Oakville, Ont., Donald Cook of Toronto, and Dean Foster and Stuart Nemtin of Vancouver.

Kaleidoscope Theatre's season begins here Oct. 10

Prior to beginning the rehearsal of the new program, these young actors went through a rigorous five weeks of preparation for becoming an ensemble. Daily day-long workshops were conducted by Kaz Piesowocki (mime), Jackie Searle (movement), Ralph Cole (music and voice) and Paul Liittich (improvisation). Also working on movement with the group has been Lena di Guevara who trains her actors in the quality of total absorption and the utilizing of childhood recollections.

The point of all this preparation is that a group of actors who have not worked steadily or perhaps at all together previously cannot become an ensemble overnight.

Development of the ensemble only comes when the actors have learned a sort of shorthand of word and image, says Gorrie. They can then work together quickly and creatively, instantly understanding each other's intent and mood, sharing closely in a pattern of action and response.

The watcher on the sidelines at workshop sessions was able to see this taking place as the group responded to a simple idea as first expressed by one of them, then taken up and "grown" by the others; or to the tactile stimulus of a length of material that at times became a threatening presence — a sci-fi monster — at others a shelter or a sculptural substance.

Experiments with voice to discover the range, textures, dynamics, color and kinds of sound the human larynx is capable of producing are an important part of the training sessions; just as essential as discovering the multitude of ways in which the body, without voice, can define a thought or an emotion.

The versatility of this small company goes further. Its members must also be proficient in the design and creation of stage props and costume pieces including masks and wigs. Because the budget is always extremely tight and traveling must be light, simple props must serve many purposes; for example, a few yards of white fabric can be a sail, a robe, or the wings of a bird as they were so effectively in Liz's adaptation of The Snow Goose.

Or a set of long slender poles manipulated by the actors can present the image of a house with gable roof, a fenced farmyard or a pyramid in Egypt. For one of this season's plays, Liittich has invented and Carole Sabiston has executed, sun bonnets that when turned inside out become masks of fantastic farmyard animals.

Because of the esteem they have earned from such experts as ASSITEJ personnel and Canada Council's theatre division, Kaleidoscope has been pushed out in front to play an international role in children's theatre, says Liz Gorrie.

"That means we must grow and expand in order to meet the challenge of leadership. Unfortunately children's theatre is the most under-financed of all the performing arts in Canada. Consequently we're always under pressure of time and can't rehearse long enough to make a full investment in the growth of our work."

On that basis what Kaleidoscope has managed to accomplish up to now is not far short of a miracle and only emphasizes the qualities of inspiration possessed by its creators.

The pieces now being rehearsed include a Kaleidoscope-commissioned play by noted B.C. playwright George Ryga. The title is The Place Where Jeremiah Lives, and the theme is prejudice. Ryga was so delighted with Kaleidoscope productions he saw during their interior tours that he invited the company to invite him to write for them. The production is designed for secondary schools.

For kindergarten to Grade III, there is a piece called Digs, which is about people and their dwellings, from cave to condominium. Grades IV to VII will be treated to a charming play called Sumidagawa, which is based on a Japanese Noh drama.

The season includes an early winter tour of the interior from Prince George to the Sechelt Peninsula, a visit to Winnipeg to participate in a three-day mini festival staged by the Manitoba Theatre Workshop and a special production in conjunction with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

ROTHSTEIN TO PERFORM

Renowned English violinist, Jack Rothstein, will be the guest artist when the Victoria Conservatory of Music presents a performance of Vivaldi's delightful The Seasons, Thursday at 8 p.m. at Craigdarroch Castle.

Featured will be the Conservatory Faculty Chamber Ensemble led by Sydney Humphreys and with Linn Hendry at the harpsichord.

Chinese Art Classes Begin

Another of the popular series of courses in Chinese painting commenced today at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria and will continue there for the next 10 weeks. There will be a specialized course from 12 noon to 2 p.m., and a beginners course from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m.

The beginners course introduces fundamentals of brush-wielding, the inter-relationships of brush, ink, water and Chinese paper, the basic strokes in Chinese painting and elementary mounting techniques. The specialized course is for those who have acquired the beginners experience. Some of the sessions will focus on rocks, mountains and landscapes, figures, buildings and boats, birds and shrubs and further techniques in modern painting.

The instructor is Stephen Sham of Tiki Gallery, a pupil of the world-renowned Ting Yen-yung of Hong Kong.

Classes will commence next week in crewel embroidery, taught by Dorita Grant. The eight-week courses start on Tuesday and Wednesday: advanced session from 10 a.m. to noon; beginners 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Further information is avilable from Mrs. Hesse at 384-4101, local 20.

There will be several notable exhibitions opening at the Gallery during the fall, including Two Millenia of Chinese Ceramics (Oct.12); the Tananbaum Collection of 19th century art, a touring exhibition organized by the National Gallery (Oct. 21-Nov. 26); and a Margaret Peterson Retrospective spanning four decades of the work of the noted Victoria artist (Oct. 21-Nov.26).

For four days, Oct. 12-15, the popular Artists and Craftsmen at Work show returns to the gallery. An annual event for some years, construction problems connected with the new wing forced its cancellation in 1977.

The gallery is holding a used book sale on Oct.7 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Further donations will be welcome. Quality books are being sought, especially those on art but the selection will range from popular fiction to specialized reference books.

First Guest-Conducted Season

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

An exciting and decisive season for the Victoria Symphony will begin on Oct. 1.

It is the first time in its 38-year history that symphony lovers will experience an all-guest-conducted season. It is also the first time that symphony patrons will be enjoying a fully professional orchestra; of the 60-odd players, 40 form the fully salaried core and others are working musicians whose contracts guarantee them a minimum number of concerts.

The potential for outstanding performance is enormous and the challenge for the players, of responding to 12 conductors' varying styles and demands, is equally impressive.

Only once before has Victoria Symphony's conductor been chosen through the guest process. Most recent occupant of the podium, Laszlo Gati, was selected in 1968 after half a season of guest conductors following the resignation of Otto-Werner Mueller.

For audiences, aside from the purely musical interest of hearing so many accomplished conductors direct the orchestra, there is an additional pleasure to be had in participation through ballot, in the final choice. However many factors will be weighed ultimately by the selection committee made up of members of the board and orchestra with input from resident professionals of symphonic experience.

Christopher Adey, a conductor with a considerable reputation in Britain, comes to Victoria to direct the opening pair of concerts and in the solo spot will be the lovely Italian operatic star, soprano Anna Moffo. Moffo will be performing arias from operas by Puccini, Verdi and Charpentier, and Adey will conduct the orchestra in Mozart's "Haffner"" Synphony No. 35, Grieg's Holberg Suite and the Johann Strauss Waldmesiter Overture.

Looking ahead at the season, highlights appear to include the presence in November of famous international pianist Rudolph Furkusny playing the Beethoven Concerto No.2 with Greek conductor Emanuel Piculas; also in November that phenomenal artist of the violin, Yuri Mazurkevich, playing with conductor Ruben Gurevich the Mendelssohn E Major Concerto and the great French hornist Barry Tuckwell who will be here in December.

Robert Aitken, a Canadian and one of the world's most notable flutists, will be conducted by Paul Freeman, in a performance of the Mozart No. 1, and, with a genuflection to native pride, we'll have Victoria pianist Walter Prossnitz (studying in Vienna this winter), guesting with conductor Simon Streatfeild; Timothy Vernon conducting in January; the Amity Singers appearing with Ottawa's Brian Law, and Glen Fast, now assistant conductor with the Vancouver Symphony, on the podium for the final concert pair with the famous Romeros as guests. However, no one can confidently predict ahead of time just where the memorable moments will crop up.

Currently Glen Fast is conducting the 40-member core orchestra in a program for elementary schools. These concerts are informal, the orchestra playing in the middle of the auditorium with the youngsters surrounding it. The concert includes discussions on the instruments by Fast who also fields questions from his audience.

There has been an enthusiastic response to the program, according to symphony manager Jean Hunter. "We've eight dates up to Christmas and can't handle any more," she says. "In April, starting Easter Monday, there will be a week of visiting schools in a production with Kaleidoscope Theatre, performances which will be conducted by George Corwin."

Aside from a return of the Vienna Choir Boys in October there are two outstanding "specials" — renowned Canadian ballet stars Karen Kain and Frank Augustyn who achieved a 10-minute standing ovation at the Bolshoi Theatre, are coming in December for two performances, and there will be a single performance by the Toronto Symphony Orchestra in May.

Obviously funding is a foremost and vital consideration at any time but particularly this season, and Hunter confirms that several projects are in the works, among them a $25 a plate dinner and auction to be held at the Victoria Racquet Club on Nov. 25.

However, the backbone of any such organization is the season subscriber list and this is without doubt the year in the orchestra's history when it most urgently requires the loyalty and support of every musically aware person.

Joan Watson Fast reveals mysteries of French horn to Reece Cavin (centre) and Terrie Nash during children's symphony concert at Belmont School.

Last-minute changes have been announced for the venue of scheduled Victoria Symphony concerts in October. The opening pair, Oct. 1 and 2, will now take place in the new University of Victoria concert auditorium off Finnerty Road, at the usual times. Days and times will be rescheduled for other concerts. Ticket holders are advised to get in touch with the Symphony office, 385-9771

BEETHOVEN'S NINTH SET FOR NEW AUDITORIUM

The assembling of full University of Victoria musical forces to celebrate the opening of UVic's handsome new concert auditorium with a performance of Beethoven's towering and ecstasy-filled Ninth Symphony, is an ideal concept.

Nothing less could have been so well suited to the history-making occasion.

Experts have been describing the new "surround" designed auditorium as probably the finest concert hall of its size — 1,300 seats — in Canada from a point of view of acoustics as well as sight and aesthetic proportion.

The moment of truth, when these beliefs will hopefully be confirmed, comes Friday at 8 p.m. when the auditorium fills for the first time and the opening phrases of the Ninth, performed by UVic chorus, orchestra and soloists, under the baton of George Corwin, fall on the listening ears of Victoria music lovers.

The inaugural public concert will be repeated Saturday at the same time. The pair are being presented as the first Taylor Scholarship concerts of the season with all proceeds going to the scholarship fund.

Joining the 275-member University chorus and orchestra for this red-letter event will be guest soloists Phyllis Mailing, mezzo soprano, Barbara Collier, soprano, Thomas Hayward, tenor, and operatic baritone Bernard Turgeon. The latter, an internationally known Canadian artist, is now a resident of Victoria and a visiting associate professor on the UVic music faculty.

The second work to be performed on this program is Ralph Vaughan Williams' Serenade To Music, written for 16 soloists and orchestra.

Foul Play Entertaining Despite Chevy Chase

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

The only foul thing about Foul Play is the mismatch of delectable Goldie Hawn and smart-alec wise guy Chevy Chase.

Chase, in his first starring movie role, is as anxious to please as a puppy and spends too much time clowning. The part calls for the sophistication and wit of a Cary Grant but Chase plays an extension of his Saturday Night Live character. In a role that calls for finesse and timing, Chase gives slapstick.

The movie, a comedy thriller, would have been funnier if Chase had played it straight. But even though he doesn't do much to enhance Goldie's effervescent innocence, he doesn't detract from it either. On the whole, Goldie's accomplished comic style and a great supporting cast including Burgess Meredith and Dudley Moore make this a very entertaining movie.

Foul Play is crammed full of all the things detective movies are famous for: mysterous villians, murders, car chases and plenty of suspense — played for laughs most of the time, although there are a few anxious moments. Goldie is all wide-eyed naivete in her role of a slightly scatterbrained librarian who unwittingly becomes a murder target.

The trouble starts when, hoping for a little action, she gives a ride to a hitch-hiker. He turns out to be a secret agent who is carrying some important information about a plot to kill the Pope. The agent gets bumped off, but not before slipping the information in the unsuspecting Goldie's purse.

From here on the movie takes on shades of Hitchcock as she eludes a non-stop series of attempts on her life and tries to convince everyone she's telling the truth. Of course, the police, including Chase who plays a detective, think she has a hyperactive imagination. Her looney landlord played by Burgess Meredith, who keeps a pet python and is a geriatric karate expert, is the only one who doesn't question her sanity.

Patricia Phillip, who studied theatre and dance at the University of Alberta, is back for a second season with the Dawson City vaudeville group.

Vaudeville Returns Here After 64 Years

Direct from four months at The Palace Grand Theatre in Dawson City, Yukon, Gaslight Follies 1978 arrives at the Mac Wednesday complete with jugglers, singers, comedians and of course, the inevitable Can Can chorus line.

Those who believe that all old theatres are haunted will imagine a stirring of ghosts in the dimmest recesses of the playhouse, for the McPherson began life as a vaudeville house and was indirectly related to the historic Palace Grand in Dawson City.

The Palace Grand was constructed at the height of the Klondike gold rush when Dawson City was the largest city north of San Francisco and west of Winnipeg. An elaborate theatre, it has been restored by Parks Canada's historic sites division.

From his post as a bartender in the seething frontier city, a handsome young Greek named Alexander Pantages, observed the success of the opera house and decided it was the way to go. Being penniless didn't stop him for long. He found a way to stake himself by charming the famous Klondike Kate out of her fortune and broke into the theatre business for himself.

From that beginning and starting on the west coast, Pantages eventually established one of the biggest theatre chains in North America. He built the McPherson Playhouse, then named after him — the "Pantages" — in Victoria in 1914 and it became one of the most prestigious theatres on the Pacific Coast, hosting the finest vaudeville entertainment to be found anywhere.

The Gaslight Follies is a theatre group which has performed for the past three summers at the Palace Grand. It's an offspring of The Frantic Follies, which has entertained Whitehorse audiences for 10 years and has made two cross-Canada tours. The Gaslight troupe is making its first foray away from Dawson City, having played for four months, six nights a week this summer and delighted an estimated 20,000 people.

From Victoria the troupe will travel down to Boise, Idaho, for a two-day engagement.

The program varies from vaudeville to melodrama and attempts, says producer Jim Murdoch, to recreate as closely as possible, the kind of performance that would have been seen by those crusty old prospectors, ladies of leisure and dandy gentlemen who comprised the audiences of 1899.

Gaslight Follies will do three performances at the McPherson — Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, starting at 8 p.m. Tickets are on sale at the McPherson box office and Hillside Mall ticket centre.

Three Classics For Children Set

Three well-loved children's classics will be presented on stage by Victoria's Four Seasons Musical Theatre this coming season.

The first of these will be a musical adaptation of Hans Christian Anderson's The Emperor's New Clothes. This is the famous New York version conceived by the Prince Street Players and which was featured on PBS television's Channel 9.

It will be performed on four successive Saturdays, starting Oct. 14 at the McPherson Playhouse. Yet to be announced are additional performances at Oak Bay and Sidney.

Early in the New Year there will be productions of Rumplestiltskin and The Sleeping Beauty in musical versions by Canadian playwrights and composers.

Under the professional direction of Peter Mannering and Alan Magee, the plays will feature a number of well known Victoria performers.

A FINAL RECITAL as organist and music director of St. John's Anglican Church, Quadra, will be given by Edward Norman, Sunday, at the church at 8 p.m. Norman has been in the St.John's post for four years and has a wide reputation as a fine musician, accompanist and recitalist.

NFB Fare

A new series of free noon-hour screenings by the National Film Board has begun and will continue each Friday through Dec. 15. Each screening will start a few minutes after 12 and continue until 1 p.m. The showings take place at 811 Wharf.

Int. Land

Directors of International Land Corp. Ltd. announced they have approved in principle a takeover proposal from Hastings West Investment Ltd., a private Vancouver holding company.

Gilbert Bradner, president of International Land, said minority shareholders will receive $12.50 a share if the proposal is accepted. Trading in the stock has been halted since late August when it last traded at $8.

Hastings West already owns 68 per cent of the stock.

Bradner said the $12.50 price was determined by an independent appraisal of the market value of the company's real estate assets and advice from independent chargered accountants.

The proposal will be presented at a shareholders' meeting and requires a majority vote.

The proposed transaction is to be completed by the end of this year.

International Land also reported Tuesday higher earnings and higher revenues for the six months ended June 30.

Net profit was a record $333,944 or 52.2 cents a share, up considerably from $138,689 or 39.6 cents a share in the 1977 period. The earlier period contained an unusual gain of $88,358 from the disposal of Sheraton Olympia Hotel. Revenues climbed to $8,545,159 from $7,718,874.

Among the company's holdings are a number of apartment and condominium properties in West Vancouver, and a condominium development at Whistler Mountain.

OK Helicopters

Okanagan Helicopters Ltd., Canada's largest helicopter operating company, and its subsidiaries reported an increase in revenue but a decrease in net earnings in the six months ended July 31.

Gross revenue for the period was $21 million, compared with $18.1 million last year, while net earnings were $617,000, or 58 cents a share, this year, down from $703,000, or 66 cents a share, in 1977.

John Pitts, company chairman and president, said the firm has kept busy despite slow growth of the market.

Bombardier

Bombardier Inc. reported a net income of $2,203,000 or 57 cents a share for the first six months of 1978, compared with a loss of $5,620,000 or $1.44 a share for the same period last year.

Working capital of the Montreal-based corporation, involved in manufacturing transportation and recreational vehicles, totalled $68,288,000 on July 31.

Music Training Funds Allocated

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Following the July approval of an affiliation agreement between Camosun College and the Victoria Conservatory, the Ministry of Education has allocated funds to begin a comprehensive professional training program immediately.

The co-operative program is the result of eight months of negotiations.

Until the affiliation, Camosun had no music department or formal training program in music and was the only community college in B.C. so deprived. The affiliation establishes a music program at Camosun and with it an opportunity for musicians to pursue a two-year career-oriented professional program at the same rates as other Camosun courses.

Programs and dates for this season's Trio Victoria concerts and for the Early Music concerts, the Conservatory's two top faculty series, are announced and brochures are available from the office.

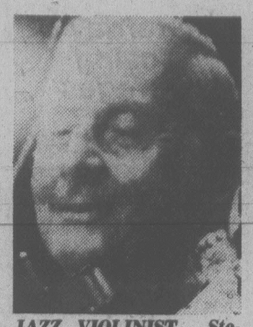
The trio, consisting of Sydney Humphreys, violin, James Hunter, cello and Robin Wood, piano, gives its first concert Oct. 6 with works by Mozart, Chopin and Brahms. There will be a concert each month through March, on Friday evenings at 8 at the Conservatory.

The early music series of concerts, also on Fridays at 8 p.m., features the Faculty Baroque Ensemble, with guest appearances by such well known Victoria musicians as Selena James, soprano, and Jesse Read, bassoon, and La Confierie St.Julien. First of these concerts will occur on Oct. 13.

The series is built around the composer Vivaldi, celebrating the tercentenary of his birth. Programs will illustrate the range of styles in 18th-century European music, featuring the brilliant, inventive concerti of Vivaldi with a background of the music of his most celebrated contemporaries — J.S. Bach, Handel, Telemann and Couperin.

Other events in October include the second annual awards day, Oct. 1 at 2:30 p.m., and a recital by faculty members Barbara Eadie, flute, and Edward Norman, piano, Oct. 20.

All these events take place at 1050 Joan Crescent.



JAZZ VIOLINIST Stephane Grappelli, plays here at the McPherson Playhouse, Friday. The indefatigable and ineffable Grapelli surrounded by his Diz Disley Trio and special guests, The Westside Feetwarmers, will play two concerts, at 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

RCCO HYMN FESTIVAL

The Royal Canadian College of Organists (RCOO) is an organization whose Vancouver Island Branch not only takes a watchful attitude toward standards of organ playing and fosters promising young players.

Its members do not have to be organists or choir directors but may be members of choirs or church congregations. The prime concern is to improve standards for both professional and amateur musicians from all demoninations of churches.

The Island Branch is arranging a hymn festival for Oct. 28. It will be held at the Anglican church of St.John the Divine on Quadra. Representatives of various denominations will join in song and members of the public may also lend their voices to the occasion.

In November there will be a choral workshop at Grace Lutheran Church hall and other activities will be occurring throughout the winter and spring.

Musicians Audition

Young musicians wishing to audition for the 1979 edition of the 100-member National Youth Orchestra, must meet an early deadline — Sept. 30.

The national auditions will be held in 20 cities across Canada during the months of October through December. All Canadian music students over the age of 10 may apply.

There is no application fee but those wishing to audition must send a deposit of $50 which is refunded to all candidates except those selected to play in the NYO.

Application forms may be obtained from the NYO, 76 Charles Street West, Toronto M5S IK8, or telephone, 416-922-5031.

HERE'S WHAT FRED LERCH HAS TO SAY ABOUT CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

Canada Trust Realtor

September 12, 1978

Mr. Dennis Thompson,
Classified Advertising Manager,
VICTORIA PRESS LTD.
2621 Douglas Street
Victoria, B.C.
V8W 2N4

Dear Mr. Thompson,

As a practising Realtor in this beautiful town I realize the importance of effective advertising.

You have probably noticed that recently our office decided to change to larger headlines in the classified. Now, the purpose in using larger headlines and emphasizing a unique feature of the property is to attract the readers interest in the lines which follow.

Does it work? Yes, it certainly does! Since using the larger headlines not only have the number of phone calls my fellow realtors in the office and I receive increased, but also do I personally attribute the recent sale of 2 homes (see ads attached) as a direct result from this particular advertising practice.

Thank you "Victoria Classified" for the splendid job you are doing and special thanks to John Hutchinson who, in his curtious way, gets the job done most efficiently.

Sincerely,
Fred Lerch

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Clare Ritter left for her long-sought voyage with one reservation—she's worried about all the aluminum cans that are going to the trash heap because she's not around.

The 71-year-old widow spent three years pedalling a bicycle and chasing down aluminum cans to sell for 13 cents a pound to a recycling plant to pay for her trip.

On Friday, Mrs. Ritter flew to Istanbul to board the liner Odessa for a 32-day, $2,885 cruise to Egypt, Greece and North Africa.

Before she left Friday, she had another load of cans for the aluminum plant. The truck driver who picked them up also gave her a lift to meet her tour group.

NEWCASTLE—UPON—TYNE, England — British disc jockey James Whale today set a world record by kissing 4,000 women on the cheek in eight hours.

Whale, 27, beat Jeffrey Henzler of Indiana, Penn., who last year kissed 3,225 women in eight hours — a rate of one kiss for every 8.93 seconds.

The record — one kiss for every 7.2 seconds — was set under strict observation of rules in Guinness Book of Records.

LANETT, Ala. — Three Alabama men who set out from the West Point Dam on the Alabama-Georgia line hoping to break the world record for the longest paid taxicab trip say they will reach their goal early next week.

The longest trip to date, according to the Guinness Book of World Records, is 10,821 kilometres (6,752 miles). The Alabamians figure they will surpass that between Sioux Falls, S.D., and West Point, Neb.

The taxi travellers — driver Freddie Hamby and passengers Charles Dailey and Herbert Sedinger, all of Lanett — were in Colorado Springs, Colo., Friday.

MUNICH, West Germany — ADAC, the West German auto club, awarded its "silver lemon" for 1978 to Peter Fuscher who after only nine months and 44,800 kilometres had to replace nearly every part in his new car.

ADAC said Ford Werke AG, makers of the car, replaced the engine, transmission, drive shaft, clutch, radiator, brake discs, parts of the rear axle and about 60 other parts. There were no charges to Fuscher, it was under guarantee.

Finally, the maker gave Fischer a new car, ADAC said.

HUSBAND'S RELIGION CAUSE FOR DIVORCE

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — Because of extreme religious fanaticism, a 41-year-old man condemned his wife and children to a life from which all social enjoyment was excluded, said a Manchester divorce court judge.

"He believed there is a man's place and a woman's place in the world," said Judge Esyr Lewis, when he granted a decree nisi to 29-year-old Dawn Wiggins, wife of Richard Wiggins, a member of the non-conformist Open Brethren Church.

"He believed women should behave like women and do the domestic chores and men should not busy themselves with women's work," the judge said. "He condemned his family to a narrow existence because of his religious beliefs.

"He pressured his wife into not wearing trousers or makeup and objected to her cutting her hair. He objected to her reading books or women's magazines, insisting that she read the Bible instead.

"He would not have the television used in the house on a Sunday and took the family to church at least once, if not twice.

"The result was to create in the home a restrictive and oppressive atmosphere which, as the years went by, the wife found more and more difficult to endure.

"She knew of his religious beliefs when she married him, but there is bound to be give and take in a marriage and the husband must take his wife as he finds her. This husband never did relax his attitudes at all."

Forest Research Hobbled By Federal Fund Cuts

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $5.3 million cut from the $38 million federal forest service budget has aroused dismay in the B.C. forest industry and brought warnings that it could hamper important forest research.

About $3.3 million of the money pared from the forest service budget was slated for the Western Forest Products Laboratory here and another lab in Ottawa. The other $2 million in cuts will mean a major closure of facilities at the national forestry research station at Petawawa, Ont.

The cutbacks were recently announced by the federal government as part of a $1.5 billion budget reduction. Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau had said in July, however, that foresty research would be boosted.

The two labs have been told to prepare for the cuts by April 1, 1979. The Western operation would lose half its current funding.

"The government is giving on the one hand and taking away with the other," said R.G. Rogers, chairman of Crown Zellerbach Ltd. "There seems to be a direct conflict in policies here."

He said the Western laboratory is a vital ingredient to a prosperous lumber industry and that the precipitous way in which its work could be disrupted was impossible to understand.

Dr. Bob Kenny, head of the Western lab, said if research teams were dismantled, even for a short term, it would take years to recoup the lost momentum.

A spokesman in Environment Minister Len Marchand's office said it was hoped that private industry would take up the slack so that the labs don't have to drop staff or curtail services. He said it had not yet been decided how much each facility would lose.

Rogers said he didn't think the industry would object to the idea of paying more for research, but said the lack of advance warning was illogical and looked like a crisis decision.

Rogers, head of Marchand's forest advisory committee, said he knew nothing about the cutbacks until reading them in a newspaper, adding he doubted "whether the minister knew himself."

A spokesman for the Council of Forest Industries here said the B.C. forest industry stands to lose the most by research cutbacks.

He said both laboratories are primarily related to solid wood research. B.C.'s solid wood shipments last year totalled $2.8 billion with total Canadian shipments at $2.79 billion.

Ian Barclay, chairman of B.C. Forest Products, agreed that the lack of advance warning on the cutbacks posed serious problems. He said, however, the industry could absorb more research costs if there are suitable tax concessions.

Fishing Truce Not That Near

VANCOUVER (CP) — A fishermen's spokesman says that negotiations on the Canada-U.S. fishing agreement are not progressing as well as federal officials have been saying.

George Hewison, general secretary of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and an industry adviser for the West Coast in the ongoing fishing negotiations, said he sent a telegram Friday to Fisheries Minister Romeo Leblanc complaining about news reports ob the talks.

His complaints follow reports from Ottawa earlier this week that a fishing truce is in sight, with U.S. and Canadian fishermen likely to be allowed to return to fishing in each other's waters next year. A final settlement on maritime boundaries may take another three or four years, said reports.

Hewison said Friday that not only are senior federal officials violating the confidentiality of the negotiations by issuing public statements on the progress of the talks, but it appeared that major moves in the negotiations were being made without full consultation with the advisers.

"I now learn via a press release that Canada's boundary position vis-a-vis the U.S. has changed without explanation," said Hewison.

He told LeBlanc that a senior fisheries official has stated that a West Coast agreement with the U.S. on fisheries matters is near.

Symphony Switches To UVic

them the equivalent seating in the new concert hall. It is a difficult problem. Fortunately, the new facility is excellent and there are no bad seats in the house."

Hemingway said the UVic concert hall is superior to the Royal in every way except seating capacity. UVic has only about 1,200 seats while the Royal has 1,455.

He said the experience of performing at UVic was certain to get orchestra members talking about the advantages of switching on a permanent basis and therefore the delay could be costly to the city.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the city conceded communications had been poor between Royal Theatre management and the orchestra.

"Nobody told anybody what was going on," he said.

The problems arose three months ago when there was a delay at the start of renovations but the contractor, Wheaton Construction, was confident the time could be made up.

As it turned out the completion target of Oct. 1 could not be met and now it will be Oct. 20 before work is finished.

Renovations are under way on dressing rooms, which have been criticized as totally inadequate. New facilities are being installed.

Guaranteed Income Eyed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Friday that because current methods of providing financial aid to British Columbia's disadvantaged need immediate revision, he plans to set up a guaranteed monthly income program in B.C. next year.

Vander Zalm said that the present situation in B.C. is so intolerable, "I don't want to be a part of it for much longer.

"If we have to work alone, we will," he said. "I want changes fairly quick."

He said a provincial scheme would include existing payment plans and provide a basic monthly allowance to families living below an as-yet-undetermined level of income, "similar to a negative income tax approach."

Adjustments would be made for people with extra living expenses such as the handicapped, and families could earn extra income without it being deducted dollar for dollar from their cheque, he said.

Vander Zalm did not specify whether a provincial payment would cover federal programs such as unemployment insurance and family allowance.

"He will have an experimental program very soon," he said.

Vander Zalm said the province's existing method of distributing money to the needy "penalizes people who look for jobs; it is turning people into cheaters."

Under existing social assistance legislation, single recipients are allowed to earn up to $50 a month. Any income above that is deducted from their welfare cheque.

CP Air To Make Refunds

VANCOUVER (CP) — Most of the passengers who were forced to buy expensive airline tickets to get home during the recent 10-day Air Canada shutdown will be reimbursed.

The refunds are being claimed by passengers who had planned to travel charter-class rate on Air Canada but were forced to fly with CP Air when the strike shut down Air Canada operations.

CP Air spokesman Jim McKeachie said Friday the airline carried most of the 2,000 passengers who had to pay more to get their charter-class tickets upgraded.

"As a goodwill gesture, CP Air has decided to refund the fare differences," he said.

Hikers Plucked From Danger

At daybreak they continued their journey until they reached the mouth of Camper Creek. There they found themselves perched on top of of a steep cliff. They used a rope to let themselves down to a sandbar.

But on the way down, Johnsen's hold slipped, and she tumbled more than 40 feet, miraculously escaping serious injury. But she was bruised and injured a leg.

The climax was yet to come.

Johnsen and her companion found the only way they could reach the campsite was to cross to a rock in the middle of the channel. It was surrounded by water but they didn't think it was deep enough to bar their progress.

They got to the rock but soon found the rushing water made crossing imposible. They turned to go back, but in that short time, the sea and the fast-flowing creek blocked their way.

"We were trapped," said Johnsen. "We shouted and waved for half an hour but no one heard us or saw us. The water rose, and already part of the rock was awash. We couldn't do anything. Swimming was impossible. We would have been taken out to sea."

It was at this moment that camp cook Cooper came out of the bunkhouse, looked out to sea and spotted them.

An inflatable boat manned by trail boss Jim Hamilton, Cooper and members of the trail crew, plucked the women from the rock in the nick of time.

"In a few more minutes they would have been swept out to sea and no one would ever have known what happened to them," said Hamilton. "It was as close a shave as you can make it."

DRAIN CLAIM 'A MYTH'

Midnight Ferry Keeps Money Here, Says Chamber Director

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The argument that the midnight ferry is draining local money to Vancouver is a myth, says Victoria Chamber of Commerce transportation director Jack McKernan.

"In fact, the service is keeping money in Victoria," he said.

It is an important question because the future of the little-used midnight ferry may depend upon it.

In October the board of B.C. Ferries must decide whether to repeat the service next year, despite the cost, as a benefit to the Victoria community.

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce waged a 10-year campaign to get the ferry and the experiment was conducted from June 28 to Sept. 6 to see if there was a need — and a net gain for Victoria.

Traffic manager Bill Bouchard, in assessing the value of the service, wondered why the chamber was promoting a service to help Victorians spend money on the Lower Mainland.

But McKernan insists it is not true the ferry creates an economic drain. If it did, as manager of Hillside Shopping Mall and a chamber director, he would oppose it.

"People go to Vancouver at night to spend money on things not available in Victoria," he said.

"They go to sporting events like the B.C. Lions, the Whitecaps and the Canucks or they go to major cultural and art events.

"They will go over anyway; the only question is whether they are going to spend another $50 in Vancouver for a hotel room afterwards. That is the issue. I believe the midnight ferry will keep money in Victoria."

McKernan said local consumers do not use the midnight ferry to go to Vancouver to buy clothes or kitchen appliances.

Most Victorians buy these things locally. Anyone travelling to Vancouver to buy these goods would go in the daytime. The midnight ferry does not affect their plans in any way.

Meanwhile, the late sailing helps keep money in Victoria. Amateur teams travelling to the mainland can get home the same night, saving the price of a Vancouver hotel. The same applies to sport fans travelling to the mainland for an evening game.

McKernan said there is a clear need for the midnight ferry and traffic will grow as the service becomes more widely known.

McKERNAN
. . . worthwhile service

"B.C. Ferries spends thousands and thousands of dollars advertising its service but the midnight sailing is still a big secret.

"If they want it to fail, it's simple. All they have to do is not advertise it. If you took a survey, you'd find that nine people in 10 in Victoria are not aware of the midnight sailing.

"All it needs is a good publicity campaign."

Bouchard, the traffic manager, concedes there is some value in the late night service, despite the small number of customers.

"The few who used it were very grateful it was there.

"We will have to weigh the cost against the value of the service to the Victoria community."

The traffic statistics are not impressive.

During the 69 days it carried a total of 3,983 vehicles and 10,954 passengers.

This comes to an average load of 57.8 vehicles and 158.8 passengers which means it was running at 41 per cent capacity for cars and 16 per cent capacity for passengers.

A lot of that business was jammed into the last 10 days of August during the Pacific National Exhibition.

But the crew making the midnight run must end its voyage in its home port. It was decided to use a Victoria crew on the midnight run and these people left Swartz Bay on a 10:15 p.m. sailing to get to Tsawwassen.

(The alternative was to start a Vancouver crew from Tsawwassen at midnight but this meant they would not get back to their homes until after 4 a.m. because of the sail back from Swartz Bay.)

The 10:15 p.m. sailing from Swartz Bay, then, became part of the package for the midnight trip and while it didn't run empty — it came close.

"If ever any project could be labelled a turkey it was that 10:15 p.m. sailing from Swartz Bay," Bouchard said.

On an average trip the 1,000-passenger ferry had 38 paying customers on board — looked after by a crew of 34. And the car decks, which hold 138 vehicles, carried only 11.

This meant an average passenger load of four per cent of capacity and a vehicle load of only eight per cent of capacity.

The important numbers, as far as costs are concerned, come from averaging the 10:15 p.m. trip with the midnight sailing.

Here there was an average of 98 passengers or just under 10 per cent of capacity plus 35 vehicles or 25 per cent of capacity.

There were some successes during the summer.

"There was that incredible night of the rock concert in Vancouver (Sunday, Aug. 27) when there were 44,000 people at Empire Stadium," Bouchard said.

"It turned out that a lot of them came from Vancouver Island and they were determined to get home.

"Things were just settling down at Tsawwassen when the terminal manager saw all these cars booming down the causeway.

"There were hundreds and hundreds. The Queen of Saanich was just about to tie up at 11:40 p.m. but the crew agreed to make another round trip.

"That got us out of a real jam. The ferry had a complete load and the regular midnight sailing was more than half full.

"It showed that there could be a real need for a midnight sailing at certain periods.

"Still, we wonder why the Victoria Chamber of Commerce would push so hard for this when all it does is encourage people to spend their money in Vancouver."

Two Face Charges After Shots, Stakeout

Dean Wesley Bowman, 18, and Paul Douglas MacRae, 25, both of no fixed address, appeared in provincial court this morning charged with possession of a prohibited weapon. They were remanded in custody to Monday for plea and bail hearing.

Insp. Robin Stewart said today the incident began shortly before noon following reports of a number of shotgun blasts in the area.

Heavily armed and specially-equipped members of the Greater Victoria Emergency Response Team were called in and staked out a house on the block.

At 8 p.m., after several hours wait, two men bolted from the house and ran towards nearby Elk Lake.

Stewart said one of the men is believed to have tossed another weapon in the lake. Police divers were searching the water this morning.

Following the incident officers searched the house, and a man and woman were taken in for questioning.

Two Held In Mugging

Stanley Steven West, 18, of 1736 Duchess, and James Stephen Alexander Wallace, 17, no fixed address, were arrested shortly after Hugh McIlwraith of Victoria reported being beaten and robbed of $250 at about 3 a.m. in an alley near Mother's Disco in the 600-block Johnson.

This Family Really Got It All Together

max low

Togetherness is an important thing to many families.

But being all together? Now that's something else!

That's what happened to the Allenbrand family recently when the 12 brothers and sisters (and all their spouses) held their first reunion in 38 years.

Iva Hillis, one of two sisters living on Vancouver Island, chuckles softly now at the thought of the more than a year of scheming and planning that went into getting all of them in one place at the same time. And at the way the whole thing mushroomed.

"At first, it was just supposed to be a get-together of the brothers and sisters and their husbands and wives," Iva points out. "But then this one and that one wanted to bring their kids and finally, when the day (Saturday, Aug. 5) came, there were 81 immediate family members there and a couple of guests and we had to hire a church hall so we'd have enough room to move."

The story began back in 1916 when Leroy and Amy Allenbrand, a couple of transplanted Americans, settled in the little musically-inclined farming town of Handel in Saskatchewan. They had 13 children (the youngest boy was killed in an accident at the age of two), all born on their small farm.

Curiously, the girls were named in pairs. There were Ida and Iva; Mary and Mabel; Edith and Edna; and Loretta and Lorraine. But no one bothered doing anything special with the boys who were named Robert, George, Howard and Floyd.

The last picture taken of the whole family was 40 years ago when Robert, the eldest, left home. And the last time all 12 children were together in one place was in 1940 — 38 years ago.

Strangely, their first reunion since then was held in Kamloops, where none of the brothers or sisters live.

"Ida's daughter Elaine and her family live there," explains Iva Hillis. "And she did a tremendous amount of work to make the whole get-together a terrific banquet."

It was, says Iva, certainly a heart-warming experience.

"Though it was informal, there was a well-organized program for the day," she said. "Tapes were made of each couple talking and lots of photos were taken, of course. The cameras never stopped clicking.

"In the evening there was a smorgasbord dinner with music, songs and skits by members of the family. The youngsters got into the act by going round and finding out some of the naughty things their mothers or fathers did when they were kids, and then making fun of them in little plays.

"It was fun. It was really fun. But it was all too short. Much too short."

The 12 brothers and sisters and their spouses travelled to Kamloops from all over B.C., Alberta, Saskatchewan and Oregon but many of their respective children came from much further afield.

For Iva Hillis and her husband Lloyd, who live in Deep Cove, it turned out to be a double reunion as it was the first time they had been together with their three daughters at the same time for 12 years. Their three sons couldn't make it.

"There was great excitement at the church hall," Iva recalls. "Not until the last minute did we know if everyone would be there or not."

But they all made it.

There was Edith Fast of Victoria, Mary Graham of Maple Ridge, (formerly of Victoria), Ida Foulgham and Loretta Morrell of Edmonton, and Edna Dick, Lorraine Ltekeman and Mabel Allenbrand all of Saskatoon.

And on the male side of the family there was Robert, who brought his wife, three married daughters and a son from Portland; George from Slocan, B.C.; Floyd from Carstairs, Alberta; and Howard from Barrhead, Alberta.

Actually, Howard caused a bit of a stir. Iva explains:

"I heard someone in the hall say 'Where's Howard? We haven't heard from Howard.' But Howard is the only one of us who stuck with farming and he had to milk his cows and do all his chores before he left home."

Most of the brothers and sisters breathed a loud sigh of relief when Howard finally came through the door and they knew that the reunion was complete.

But not Iva Hillis.

"Not for a minute did I doubt that we would all make it," she says. "Many of the others were sure something would go wrong.

"But I knew we would all be there . . . I just felt it was meant to be."

NINE BEHEADED IN SAUDI ARABIA

RIYADH (Reuter) — Nine men were beheaded in Saudi Arabia on Friday for murder and sexual offences.

The official Saudi Press Agency said three were executed after Friday prayers in Jawaoi, near Riyadh for raping a girl. Three others were beheaded in Mecca for sexually assaulting and killing a boy and another three—two of them brothers—were beheaded at Taif.

The Taif trio were convicted of killing a soldier who tried to arrest them after finding them having sexual intercourse in a tent during the holy month of Ramadan, the news agency said.

Spies Sank Battleship

MADRID (Reuter) — Japan was able to sink the British battleship Prince of Wales in 1941 because of the activities of a Spanish espionage ring operating in the United States, says a former spy chief.

Retired Spanish diplomat Angel Alcazar de Velasco said the network he headed found out the movements of the Royal Navy's flagship in the Far East and tipped off Tokyo.

Japanese dive bombers sank the ship off the Malayan coast and more than 300 persons were killed.

Alcazar de Velasco, 69, said his spies also knew secrets of the atom bomb's development in the U.S., but their paymasters did not believe it.

He said information from the network contributed to the sinking by Japan of 60 per cent of the convoys which left the west coast of the U.S. during the Second World War.

The existence of the espionage ring which Alcazar de Velasco says he headed was disclosed earlier this month by the release of U.S. government documents.

Last Saturday, Ramon Serrano Suner, Spain's foreign minister from May, 1941, to September, 1942, denied that Spanish diplomats spied for Japan in the U.S. during the war.

Alcazar de Velasco said the information which doomed the Prince of Wales came semi-officially from the U.S. and was given to the network by the girl-friend of a U.S. agent.

"The Americans sank that ship and ended the British empire," he alleged. "What the English did not realize, and have never realized, is that war was being waged against them not only by Nazi Germany but also by the United States."

The U.S. wanted to see British supremacy and sea power reduced, he said.

Alcazar de Velasco said the late General Francisco Franco knew the spy ring in the U.S. existed and tolerated it.

Parks and Recreation
Vancouver
$45,000 range

The Board of Parks and Recreation of this major West Coast City is seeking a chief administrative officer to direct the operations of the Board towards the continued development of the area's recreational opportunities.

Reporting to a board of elected commissioners, the Superintendent will be responsible for implementing the objectives and policies of the Board, by:

- Planning, organizing, and directing the administrative functions of the Board.
- Co-ordinating the activities of five division directors and other professional staff.
- Liaising with City departments, boards and commissions, and other public bodies.
- Relating positively with the general public, volunteer staff, and involved private groups and organizations.

Strong leadership qualities, supported by extensive organizational and administrative experience will be essential to carrying out Board objectives. Although several years in senior parks administration is desirable, candidates with equivalent experience in industry will receive serious consideration.

An attractive compensation package, designed to reflect the senior nature and scope of this position, is negotiable.

Attack Nets Four Months

Seaman Joseph Jerome Marinelli, 24, was jailed for four months Friday when convicted of what the Crown called "a cowardly and brutal attack on a defenceless female."

The accused pleaded not guilty before B.C. Supreme Court Justice John Bouck, sitting as a judge of the county court, to a charge of forcibly seizing cocktail waitress Colleen Joy O'Dowd, 26, as she tried to get into her car in a dark parking lot after work last Dec. 18.

"Certainly, if the police had not intervened this man could be facing a far more serious offence," said Crown counsel Peter Birkett.

The judge observed from evidence that Marinelli had trouble with alcohol and in controlling his drinking, "and you also smoke marijuana, which some people think is fashionable these days," which together could cause fatal consequences.

"People look to the law for protection from assaults of this nature that arise from excessive consumption of these drugs," the judge said.

Constable Victor Bell of the city police said he and Constable Harvey Stevenson were on plainclothes patrol at 2:50 a.m. on Broughton when Stevenson heard a woman's scream from a parking lot in the 700 block.

In their headlights, Bell said, he could see a man standing over a woman sprawled partly out of a car parked in the lot, and when the policemen approached the man fled.

Bell said he ran about 150 feet after the man and brought him to ground with a tackle which gashed the man's forehead.

Stevenson said when he first saw the woman she was sprawled over the right front seat with her legs protruding from the open door and a man on top of her. The woman was hysterical.

O'Dowd told the court she encountered a strange man when she went to her car at about 2:30 a.m. and unlocked the driver's door. The man came up behind her and stood between her car and an adjoining car. When she realized there was not room to open her door she asked the man to stand back and he allowed her to go to the other side of her car and to open the passenger door.

As she tried to slide in, the man forced himself behind her and said, "Move over and drive."

"I threw out my keys and purse and screamed, and he put his hand over my mouth and said 'stop screaming' or he'd kill me."

The woman said she struggled quite a while and with her foot in the door so the assailant could not close it, she continued to scream although the man then had her by the throat.

She said she heard a car arrive and the attacker relaxed his grip and with a shove the pair lurched out of the car.

Marinelli, of HMCS Provider, told the court he had been with a shipmate most of the previous day, that they had started drinking beer about noon on board their ship and then had spent four or five hours drinking in The Sting nightclub, Strathcona Hotel, where he consumed seven, eight or 10 double whiskies. His partner left him and he next found himself at closing time in Vancouver Island Coach Lines terminal.

The accused said he didn't remember leaving the club, but after being turned out of the bus terminal he thought he went back to another club, the Old Forge, in the same hotel. His next recollection was being at Victoria General Hospital where a nurse was taking marijuana from his pocket and showing it to police.

"I had never been in this condition before," Marinelli said. "It may have been the combination of smoking and drinking."

His companion that day was Ivan Reber, who said Marinelli and he had drunk for more than eight hours when Reber departed about 4:45 p.m.

Reber said he saw his friend several times at the club during the evening without speaking to him, and when he noticed him about midnight, Marinelli was "really drunk — staggering. . "I told him he was going back with me and he said,'no' ".

Defence counsel C.L. Rippon said although there was considerable drinking he did not suggest drunkenness was a defence. He suggested that "forcibly seizing" was defined as false imprisonment and therefore meant some form of confinement.

No doubt it was a serious assault, he said, "but was it seizure in the sense of false imprisonment?"

The accused doesn't remember the circumstances of the assault, he said.

Revived Spectator Has a Ball

LONDON (Reuter) — Winning praise and respect, the weekly magazine The Spectator kicked up its heels, celebrating its 150th anniversary with a riotous champagne and whisky ball for hacks and politicians in an old dance hall.

The Spectator, which usually reflects right-wing political views, was in the doldrums until it was purchased three years ago by British millionaire Henry Keswick on his return to London after making a fortune in Hong Kong.

The Times said Friday that the publication, which has a circulation of only 12,000, has become "the leading intellectual magazine of the movement away from collectivism" and has outpaced its flagging left-wing rival, the New Statesman.

NEW PAPER IN BRITAIN

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's first new national newspaper in 14 years, The Daily Star, will be launched next November, it was announced Friday.

The tabloid daily will be published by Express Newspapers, which already produces the right-wing Daily Express and Sunday Express.

Right-Wing Corsicans Bomb Separatists

AJACCIO, Corsica (Reuter) — Right-wing opponents of the Corsican separatist movement planted five bombs on the French Mediterranean island today, injuring one woman and causing extensive damage, police said.

Controversial French Admiral Antoine Sanguinetti said a powerful bomb blast at his Corsican home at Ile Rousse destroyed important historical documents.

The admiral, a prominent Socialist who led a demonstration last week against the presence of the French Foreign Legion base at Solenzara in Corsica, was in Paris at the time.

Two other bombs, one of which injured a woman, exploded in Bastia, both aimed at known leaders of the separatist movement. Another two bombs wrecked a factory and a warehouse in Calvi on the northern coast.

20,000 Turn Out for Romp of Bulls

PAMPLONA, Spain (AP) — More than 20,000 persons crowded the streets of this northern city today to watch the annual running of the bulls, delayed two months because of political violence in which one youth was killed and 150 persons injured.

The celebration, usually part of the San Fermin festival held each July, will run through Monday.

A crowd of male youths clad in white and wearing red scarves ran before the bulls through the old section of Pamplona from the pens to the bull ring where the beasts will be stabbed to death in the afternoon by bullfighters.

The running of the bulls lasted four minutes and nobody was injured.

Officials decided to resume the festival to try to recoup heavy losses incurred by hotels and other business because of the suspension.

CANUCK QUARTET AILING

Four players will miss Vancouver Canucks' weekend National Hockey League exhibition games against Los Angeles Kings.

Coach Harry Neale said that right winger Rick Blight, left winger Jere Gillis, defenceman Sheldon Kannegiesser and right winger Brad Smith would miss tonight's game in Memorial Arena and Sunday's meeting in Vancouver.

Blight, a 25-goal scorer last season, is the most seriously injured. He suffered stretched knee ligaments in a scrimmage Thursday night and will be lost from 10 days to two weeks.

Gillis and Smith have groin injuries and Kannegiesser a back problem.

Game time is 8 p.m.

COUGAR PRESSURE on attack is eased temporarily as puck goes behind net and Victoria forward George Fritz is dropped in front by New Westminster's Randy Irving during Western Hockey League exhibition at Memorial Arena on Friday. Ignoring byplay in front and keeping eyes on puck are Victoria's Geordie Robertson (left) and Bruins Larry Melnyk, John Ogrodnick (8) and netminder Tom Semenchuk. Cougars won, 5-2. Jays, Indians Play Spoilers

By The Associated Press

Don Zimmer and Bob Lemon were left thinking about the ones that got away Friday night as the tailenders played spoiler in the American League's Eastern Division.

Zimmer's Boston Red Sox took a 4-3 lead into the ninth inning against Toronto, only to have the last-place Blue Jays score two runs in the bottom of the ninth and pull out a 5-4 victory.

Meanwhile, Lemon's New York Yankees rallied for three runs with two out in the bottom of the ninth to tie sixth-place Cleveland Indians at 7-7, only to lose the game 8-7 in the 10th—all of which kept first-place New York two games in front of Boston and had Zimmer shaking his head.

"What can I say?" he asked, the frustration written all over his face. "We have to win them all, but I said that before we came in here."

Lemon was equally frustrated at his team's inablity to extend its lead. "It was just one of those games," he said. "It would have been a hell of a lift."

In other games Friday night, Kansas City Royals split a double-header, winning the opener 4-2 and then losing to Minnesota Twins 4-0; California Angels beat Chicago White Sox 3-2; Milwaukee Brewers blanked Oakland A's 3-0; Detroit Tigers defeated Baltimore Orioles 7-5 in 10 innings, and Texas Rangers swept a double-header from Seattle Mariners 10-2 and 1-0.

San Diego Padres, in fourth place in the National League West and long out of pennant contention, had something to cheer about at the expense of front-running Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Padres thrashed the Dodgers 12-3 with a 20-hit assault, their biggest hit and run productions of the year.

The Dodgers, by losing, had their first-place lead over Cincinnati Reds sliced to 6½ games while their pennant-clinching number remained at three.

In other NL games, Cincinnati beat Atlanta Braves 6-4, San Francisco Giants blanked Houston Astros 2-0, Chicago Cubs defeated St. Louis Cardinals 5-3 and the Philadelphia Phillies-New York Mets game was rained out. (See results, standings on page 24).

Any combination of New York wins or Boston losses totalling seven will give the Yankees the AL East title, while Kansas City's magic number over California in the West now is four.

Boston took a 4-3 lead in the eighth inning on singles by Carlton Fisk and Fred Lynn and a sacrifice fly by Butch Hobson.

But pinch-hitter Bob Bailor led off the ninth for Toronto with an infield hit off Andy Hassler, 3-5. Alan Ashby popped out on a bunt attempt, but Bailor took second on Dave McKay's bloop single to centre. After pinch-hitter Doug Ault walked, Rick Bosetti greeted Bill Campbell with a single to center, driving in the tying and winning runs.

The Yankees erased a 7-4 deficit in the ninth on a bases-loaded walk to Reggie Jackson and a two-run single by Lou Piniella.

But in the 10th Duane Kuiper walked, moved up on a passed ball by Thurman Munson and a wild pitch by Rich Gossage and scored on an infield single by Rick Manning. Yankees shortstop Fred Stanley got to the ball hit up the middle by Manning but was unable to make a play.

Lemon said he was not surprised at the effort turned in by Cleveland and Toronto, the teams bringing up the rear of the AL East.

"They want to knock you off," Lemon said. "They were playing like this was the seventh game of the World Series. They've got pride, too, and I guess they don't want us to clinch anything when we're playing in their city."

THORBURN UPSET

Robert Paquette, 36, Montreal, defeated John McCoombs, 37, Dartmouth, N.S., in the other semi-final.

Stevens beat the reigning champion, a native of Victoria now living in Toronto, seven games to five in the scheduled 13-game semi-final.

COUGAR ROOKIES CONTINUE TO IMPRESS SHUPE

'Pretty Good Ones' Fill In Gaps

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The name of the pre-season game is search and sign. And while Victoria Cougar coach Jack Shupe doesn't want it to sound like he's patting himself on the back, he thinks "some pretty good ones" are ready to blend with the dozen holdovers that are scheduled to start with his Western Hockey League team when the season opens here next Saturday.

Brad Palmer, for example.

The Lake Cowichan product, only 17, is another one of the newcomers that appears to have won his spurs during Victoria's seven-game exhibition schedule.

The pre-season campaign wound up Friday as the Cougars skated to a well-deserved 5-2 victory over New Westminster Bruins. The result, before 1,051 fans, enabled the Cougars to finish on even terms with their Western Division rivals. Each won two, lost two and tied three games.

Palmer managed only one assist Friday. Normally a winger, he saw action at centre ice, and looked right at home. A six-footer, and growing, he's smooth, appears to have good puck sense, and is a fluid, above-average skater.

Along with the likes of centre Barry Pederson, wingers Rob Clavette and Torrie Robertson and defencemen Tony Feltrin, Greg Adams and Bob Smith, it appears Shupe has managed, rather well, to fill in the vacancies around the holdovers.

Although Cougars lost big men like Glen Cochrane and Kim Spencer through graduation, the new team has gained in size over last year's edition. Particularly on the forward lines.

They can skate and, seemingly, muscle. Only the season-to-be will tell you if they can score.

In completing their series with the defending champions, the Cougars had a few problems scoring Friday. The home team out-shot New Westminster by a whopping 53-18 margin but an outstanding performance by Bruin netminder Tom Semenchuk, combined with some erratic Victoria shooting, prevented the Cougars from reaching double figures.

Clavette, Torrie Robertson, Gary Lupul, Bob Jansch and Sid Giroux did find accuracy five times to provide the goals. John Paul Kelly and rookie Rob Kreuger scored for the Bruins.

The Bruins took 13 penalties to Victoria's eight, a factor that helped contribute to Cougars' domination. Lupul and Torrie Robertson scored power-play goals to cash in on early Bruin penalties, and the Cougars were off and running with a 2-0 lead.

Defensively, holdovers Mark Robinson, Scott Lang and Todd Morton, playing perhaps his best game in the exhibition series, provided stability but Adams, Feltrin, Smith and Ron Jacobson played exceedingly well for the Cougars. Their inexperience rarely showed.

Steve Amiss, the only over-age player in Victoria's camp, and Kevin Eastman shared netminding duties. Each allowed only one goal.

In other exhibitions Friday, Blake Stevens scored a pair of goals to lead Billings Bighorns to a 6-2 victory over the Broncos in Lethbridge; one-time Cougar Kevin Clackson scored the only goal of the third period to provide Regina Pats with a 4-3 decision over Edmonton Oil Kings, and Don Gillen's third power-play goal of the night, coming with one second left in regulation time, gave Brandon Wheat Kings a 5-4 victory over the Blades in Saskatoon.

The Saskatoon game was a fight-filled affair with teams drawing 35 minors, three game misconducts, two gross misconducts, a match penalty, a misconduct and 18 majors.

Add $4M, Say Sonics

What's Marvin Webster worth?

A player, a draft choice and $4 million, say Seattle SuperSonics. At least, that's what the Seattle team has asked National Basketball Association commissioner Larry O'Brien to award it for its loss of the seven-foot-one center to New York.

Thursday was the deadline for both teams to tell O'Brien what they considered fair compensation, and Seattle and New York have until Monday to offer written rebuttals to the other's request. The Knicks signed Webster off the free-agent market late last month.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer quoted one New York source as saying the Knicks were willing to give up young Lonnie Shelton and a first-round draft pick—New Jersey's, which they own. But that still leaves open the question of cash.

"By itself, (the $4 million figure) may sound enormous," Sonic president Sam Schulman told reporters, "but properly explained, it's very valid.

"How do I get compensation in kind if I don't have the wherewithal to go out and try to get a centre of the calibre of Webster with players and draft choices and money? Let's just use, as an example, Bill Walton.

"If I wanted to go out and get Bill Walton, it would cost me more than what I'm asking (from the Knicks.)"

Even Thistles Are Confused

Mount Douglas Thistles are listed among the three unbeaten teams in the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League, but they are still not certain why they didn't have to work for their second straight victory in the league's opening week of action.

Reynolds Roadrunners and Spectrum know why they share the top berth. Both had to exert a reasonable amount of energy Friday on the way to shutout triumphs.

Reynolds romped to a 7-0 win over Belmont Braves and the Specs cruised to a 4-0 decision over Parkland Panthers.

Members of four other teams were also among the working people. Oak Bay Bays trimmed Stelly's 7-3 and Claremont battled to a 1-1 stalemate with Esquimalt as Larry Irving scored for Claremont and Doug Walters counted for Esquimalt.

As for the Thistles, winners of the regular-season crown last season, they arrived at Victoria High for a clash with the Tyees and were advised that the game had been cancelled.

Earlier Thursday, a call from former Tyee coach Ash Valdal to Mount Douglas explained the match could not be played because rugby posts were still installed on the main soccer pitch at Vic High.

Mount Doug coach Brian Cornall did not feel this was sufficient reason for a forfeit and suggested that the game be switched to another field at Vic High and continued with his plans for a contest.

His proposal apparently went unheeded and when the Thistles arrived at Vic High they found one of the Tyees' new co-coaches, Joe Stevenson, at the site, but didn't find much else. Stevenson had not been advised of a cancellation and his co-coach, Jindy Johl, was not at the scene.

League chairman Jack Magi of Parkland, still trying this morning to sort out reasons behind the confusing situation, said the match is "probably a forfeiture," but added that he would delay a final decision until next week, after he has received additional information.

On the field, Jos Iruretagoyena scored two goals and clubmates Brent Gigliotti and Glen Jay each fired one scoring shot as Spectrum overpowered the Panthers.

Bob Brown, Greg Pynn and John Eby each counted twice and Kerry Taylor scored once as the Runners battered the Braves.

Belgium Qualifies For Semi-Final Play

MADRID (Reuter) — Belgium won a place in the semi-finals of the women's World Cup field-hockey tournament Friday with a comfortable 2-0 win over Spain.

Belgium had tied with Spain at four points when they lost 3-2 to Japan Thursday, making Friday's playoff necessary.

Canadians Blow A 2-0 Advantage

ROME (CP) — Holland came from a 2-0 deficit to defeat Canada 3-2 in afternoon matches on the third day of the world volleyball championships Friday.

In other games, Japan downed Argentina 3-0, South Korea beat the United States 3-0, the Soviet Union downed Tunisia 3-0, Belgium beat Egypt 3-2 and Venezuela downed Finland 3-2.

Fight Probe Into High Gear

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — FBI agents delivered more subpoenas Friday as a federal investigation dug into the multi-million-dollar maze of the Muhammed Ali-Leon Spinks heavyweight championship fight.

Eight grand jury subpoenas have been issued, with more possible.

Herman Copelin and Don Hubbard, who played key roles in the handling of the Sept. 15 event at the Superdome, were directed to turn in all their records on the fight by next Thursday.

Their subpoenas were for records only. Copelin told reporters the investigation was "based on misinformation."

"We will co-operate fully. We have nothing to hide."

Henry Simoneaux said he was summonsed to appear before the grand jury next Thursday, along with all his records. Simoneaux, director of ticket sales for the National Football League New Orleans Saints, said he handled ticket sales for Louisiana Sports on a short-term contract.

Simoneaux said he wasn't sure what they want him to talk about but added, "I assume they are interested in the records pertaining to the ticket sales for the fight."

There were about 50 ticket outlets for the fight here and in other cities, including Memphis and Los Angeles, he said, and "I had overall responsibility for keeping up with the tickets sold and the money received."

A subpoena was issued for Ronald (Butch) Lewis of New York City, a former vice-president of Top Rank Inc., the firm headed by Robert Arum which had overall rights to the fight promotion.

Arum said he fired Lewis because he had discovered a deal to skim $400,000 out of the proceeds. Louisiana Sports would pay Lewis $200,000 as a "finder's fee" for helping land the fight, and Top Rank would pay Copelin and Hubbard a $200,000 "finder's fee" for helping land the fight, Arum said he had learned.

Lewis has said he never received any money and added he was not fired but quit to start his own promotions firm.

A subpoena for certain documents was issued for the Bank of New Orleans, which approved a $2.7-million letter of credit to a group of Lafayette, La., investors who underwrote most of the event expenses.

The Liberty Bank and Trust Co., which loaned Louisiana Sports $320,000 for prefight promotion and arrangements, also drew a subpoena for records.

Louisiana Sports put up $4.2 million fight costs, with the Lafayette group, headed by lawyer Robert Wright, putting up the rest. The fight attracted paid attendance of $4.8 million.

U.S. Attorney John Volz said investigators were checking on whether federal laws were violated concerning interstate transportation of stolen property, mail fraud and other possible charges.

"I'm well aware you're only 28 years old. That's why I'm telling you to take better care of yourself."

Canadiens Start On Winning Note

By Canadian Press

Pierre Mondeau fired two goals and assisted on another Friday night to help Montreal Canadiens get their 1978-79 National Hockey League exhibition season started on a winning note with a 6-2 victory over Buffalo Sabres.

In the only other professional hockey game, Stan Jonathon grabbed a loose puck in the slot and banged it home to lift Boston Bruins into a 2-2 tie with New York Rangers.

With a crowd of 15,859 at Montreal Forum looking on, the Canadiens scored four times in the second period to clinch the victory in the opening game of the season for both teams.

Steve Shutt, Brian Engblom, Doug Risebrough and Yvon Lambert had the other Montreal goals while Rick Seiling and Gilbert Perreault scored for Buffalo.

Seven pro hockey exhibition games are slated tonight, including an interlocking match that has Washington Capitals of the NHL playing New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association at Hershey, Pa.

Among Sunday's six exhibition contests is an interlocking game in Winnipeg between the WHA Jets and the Blues.

Huskies Score Soccer Victory

VANCOUVER (CP) — University of Saskatchewan Huskies stopped University of British Columbia Thunderbirds 3-0 in a Canada West University Athletic Association soccer game Friday afternoon.

Huskies, who were to face Victoria Vikings in Victoria today, grabbed a 1-0 lead in the opening half and wrapped up the triumph on second-half tallies by Herb Maretski and Ian Pike.

Dibbs Upset By Stockton

Times News Services

Dick Stockton upset top-seeded Eddie Dibbs and second-seeded Brian Gottfried whipped Australian John Newcombe in third-round action of a $200,000 men's tennis tournament at Los Angeles Friday.

Stockton downed Dibbs 7-6, 6-3, while Gottfried topped the ninth-seeded Newcombe 6-2, 6-3 and was the only member of the top five seeds to reach today's quarter-finals.

Third-seeded Raul Ramirez, fourth-seeded Roscoe Tanner and fifth-seeded Sandy Mayer were all upset victims.

Seventh-seeded Arthur Ashe rallied for a 2-6, 7-5, 6-1 third-round victory over unseeded Terry Moor and advanced to the quarter-finals with No. 6 seed Harold Solomon and a pair of unseeded players, Cliff Drysdale of South Africa and Jan Norback of Sweden.

In Montreal, Yvonne Vermaak of South Africa, Americans Laura Dupont and Caroline Stoll and Francoise Durr of France won quarter-final victories in a $40,000 women's tournament.

Vermaak defeated Californian Diane Desfor, 6-7, 6-2, 6-4, while Dupont downed Glynis Coles of England 6-4, 6-1. Stoll whipped England's Michele Tyler 6-1, 6-1, and Durr beat Dana Gilbert of Piedmont, Calif., 7-5, 6-4.

In doubles action, Billie Jean King of New York and Julie Anthony of Philadelphia defeated Jeanne Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Wendy Overton of Seven Lakes, N.C., 6-2, 6-2, while Pam Whytcross of Australia and Sweden's Mimmi Wikstedt beat Durr and Dupont 6-2, 6-3.

Button Victory

Sneed, January Tied

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Despite a double bogey Friday, Ed Sneed remains tied for the lead in Napa's $200,000 Professional Golfers' Association tournament with veteran Don January.

"I was a little disgusted with myself," Sneed said, looking back to his troubles which began with a poor two-iron shot on the seventh hole Friday. "But I came back to get a birdie at nine, so the net effect is positive."

Sneed, with a four-under-par 68 on Silverado's north course Friday, and January, with a six-under-66 on the shorter south course, finished 36 holes at 134, 10 under par.

Two strokes back were six players in a tie for third—Alan Tapie, Jay Haas, Charles Coody, Barry Jaeckel, Howard Twitty and Dave Eichelbrger.

Then, at 137, 138 and 139 were golfers too numerous to mention, despite being in definite contention for the tour's last title before next week's World Series of Golf.

The final two rounds of the event are on the 6,870-yard north course, tougher than the south but not invincible as Twitty's 62 proved in the final round last year.

"The weather's perfect and the greens are in great shape. That's why the scores are so low," said Tom Watson, whose 69 put him at 137 with seven others, including Lou Graham, Ben Crenshaw and George Knudson of Toronto who had a 66 Friday.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby made the cut with a 141 total, including a 71 in the second round, while Dave Barr of Kelowna missed with rounds of 73 and 78 for a 151 total.

Dale and Partner Five Shots Back

PORTLAND (AP) — Beverly Klass and Jo Ann Dost combined for a seven-under-par 66 Friday to take the first-round lead in the $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association team championship.

The two leaders, who together have won only $6,500 on the tour this year, held a one-shot lead over three other teams on the par-73 Columbia-Edgewater course.

Tied at six-under-par 67 were the teams of Joyce Kazmeirski and Sandra Spuzich, Amy Alcott and Debbie Massey, and Beth Stone and Jo Ann Prentice.

Debbie Skinner had a hole-in-one a half hour into the tournament on the par-three, 160-yard second hole. She and Kathy Farrer were two shots back at 68.

The team of Nancy Lopez and local favorite Jo Ann Washam had an erratic round—six birdies and four bogeys—and were five shots off the pace with a two-under-par 71.

In the one-of-a-kind team tournament, the two golfers complete each hole with the lowest individual score counting. The tournament continues through Sunday.

Also at 71 was the team of Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., and Shelley Hamlin, along with Dale Shaw of Victoria and Susan Lynn.

Women Gaining On Men

SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (AP) — Women are catching up with men in running records, and in the next few years the gaps may close even more, says the chief of sports medicine at Cleveland Clinic.

Dr. John A. Bergfeld of Cleveland, Ohio, told a conference on the medical aspect of sports at the University of Rhode Island that there is no reason why women cannot run as well as men.

"A girl taught to run properly at an early age can run just like a boy," said Berfeld. "Many of the differences are the result of social and cultural restrictions."

He said there is a 10 percent difference in the running records set by men and women and "there isn't any reason why the gap shouldn't be closer."

In 1924, there was a 15 percent difference in the swim times of men and women; five years ago the gap was 10 per cent and a year later the gap was seven per cent, he said.

OOPS, SAYS JAKE, OFFICIALS IN ERROR

TORONTO (CP) — Commissioner Jake Gaudaur said officials were wrong in assessing Toronto Argonauts coach Bud Riley a 10-yard penalty in a Canadian Football League game at Winnipeg on Sept. 16.

Riley was penalized for going on the field during a sideline skirmish and Gaudaur said that while the Toronto coach was technically in breach of the rules, "I am satisfied he was motivated by a desire to assist in precluding the minor altercation becoming something more substantive."

The rule stipulates that coaches can leave the designated bench area or go on the playing field only with permission of the referee.

The officiating staff has been informed of its mistake.

Evergreen Ties Series

DETROIT (CP) — The battle for the Canada's Cup, emblematic of match-race yachting supremacy on the Great Lakes, has boiled down to a sudden-death final race today.

Canadian challenger Evergreen from Royal Hamilton Yacht Club forced the sixth and deciding race in the best-of-seven-points competition by winning the fifth race Friday on Lake St. Clair.

Evergreen spotted American defender Agape, out of Detroit's Bayview Yacht Club, a nine-second lead at the start and trailed by 28 seconds at the first mark. But Evergreen's owner-skipper Don Green closed to within nine seconds at the second mark of the five-leg, 17.5-mile race and moved his emerald green yacht ahead on the third leg.

The Canadian yacht held a five-second margin at the third mark and was 36 seconds ahead as they rounded the fourth mark and headed for home. Evergreen finished 57 in front in three hours, eight minutes, 35 seconds.

Agape's skipper, Terry Kohler, lodged three protests after the race. Green lodged one. All were disallowed by the three-man jury and the series was tied at 3-3.

Green said Kohler's protests were made out of desperation.

"They'll throw every kind of cheap protest at us because they don't know any other way to win," he said.

He said Agape used aggressive tactics designed to cause Evergreen to fault and provide the Americans with grounds for protest.

Evergreen has dominated Agape completely on the short course.

Children's Fund Benefits From Large Tuna

NORTH LAKE, P.E.I. (CP) — Dave Hyman of Ottawa landed a 960 pound bluefin tuna off here late Thursday and, in doing so, raised $9,820.80 for the disadvantaged children's fund of the Ottawa Rideau Kinsmen's club. Hyman came here with pledges of $10.05 a pound if he caught a tuna. Later, the skipper of the boat from which he caught the fish, Capt. Joey Peters, pledged another 18 cents a pound.

Lay school to start next week

The fall term of the Greater Victoria Lay School of Theology will begin Tuesday and run through Nov. 28. The sessions begin each Tuesday in that period at 8 p.m. and are held in the Christian Education Centre of Metropolitan United Church, Pandora and Quadra. Basic course this term is on Christian morals which includes an introduction of the biblical doctrine of man and nature with an investigation of nature and grace and the principles of Christian ethics and moral theology. The teaching of this series will be given by three lecturers who are specialists in the field.

In the second hour, students will have a choice of courses. Canon T. Bailey, school chairman, will give an expository and devotional study on the Gospel according to St. Luke with special attention to the background from which this particular gospel came and an attempt to discover the nature, purpose and emphasis of this writing.

The alternative course is under the general heading of Corporate Works of Mercy. There will be a wide variety of addresses covering a comprehensive spectrum of Christian works being carried out in this area, such as the Salvation Army, St. Vincent de Paul, the Cridge Centre, Inter-Church Aid, the work of the chaplain in the provincial correctional centre, hospital chaplains, psychiatry and mental health and the ministry to the sick, dying and bereaved.

Canon Bailey will repeat the course on St. Luke on Wednesday at 9:45 a.m. beginning Wednesday and running through Nov. 29 in the lounge of Christ Church Cathedral Memorial Hall.

Those seeking further particulars should contact the school's registrar, Earle Norris, 1278 Camrose Crescent, Victoria, phone 386-2313.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

Do the early chapters of the Bible's first book, Genesis, purport to be history, history as we generally understand it?

Some editions of the Bible are printed with dates at the head of each page, and in these editions the first chapter of Genesis is given the date 4004 B.C.

But this dating is in no way reflected in the early biblical manuscripts. It goes back only to 1650, when James Ussher, an Irish archbishop, somehow calculated that the creation took place in that year.

One of Ussher's contemporaries, a Cambridge scholar named John Lightfoot, was even more precise in his calculations: he said that heaven and earth were suddenly created by God on Oct. 23, 4004 B.C. at 9 a.m.

This kind of dating is repudiated by modern science. It is, of course, possible to question the accuracy of Ussher's daing without necessarily rejecting the historicity of the creation story in Genesis.

But does that resolve the issue between what some hold to be biblical teaching on creation and modern scientific cosmogony. (Cosmogony is theorizing on the origins of the universe.)

Must we look upon the Genisis creation story—or stories; there are two of them—as a primitive attempt to formulate scientific theory, an attempt we can reject on grounds that it is simply an outworn fable?

Probably the best way to approach this issue is to ask what was the motive of the ancient Hebrew scribes in writing down the creation stories. Are these stories to be taken as primitive science? Or are they something else?

There is no evidence that those ancient Hebrew scribes had what we call a scientific intention, except in a very limited way. Scientific curiosity was not a characteristic of the early Hebrew mind: It was among the Greeks that scientific ways of thinking began. The evidence we have suggests that the primary motivation behind the creation stories was not scientific but religious.

Rudolf Bultmann, one of the great biblical scholars of our time, put it in this way: "The doctrine of creation is not a speculative cosmongony, but a confession of faith in God as Lord. The world belongs to Him, and He upholds it by His power. He sustains human life, and man owes Him obedience . . . The idea of creation is the expression of the dependence of man upon God throughout his whole existence." Bultmann, it must be said, was a very controversial scholar—but few of his fellow scholars would quarrel with his assessment of the creation story.

In the certain stories in Genesis we find the great proclamation that God is good and that God cares about his creatures. In them we find the foundation on which the whole of biblical faith is built. These stories neither prove nor disprove any scientific theory—nor are they proven or disproven by any scientific theory.

They deal with a different dimension of reality, they have a different perspective. Their motivation is not scientific but religious. These stories, then, are not primitive science: they are, rather, great hymns of praise in which the writers break forth in praise of God's majesty, in joyous and spontaneous praise of His glory.

(Dr. Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa.)

Expert speaking at St. Aidan's

China talk set Sunday

China has an estimated population of more than 800 million people, or a quarter of the world's population. Until the Communist revolution, it was the largest field of Christian missionary endeavour.

What has happened and what is happening in China today—not only to the Christian church but also to the people of China?

To keep the churches informed and to help in understanding the situation in Mainland China, the Canadian Council of Churches, representing Anglican, Lutheran, Presbyterian and United Churches established, with Roman Catholic support, the Canada China program with Dr. Raymond L. Whitehead as director.

Whitehead worked in Hong Kong from 1961-76. He was research consultant on China and taught ethics at the Chinese University of Hong Kong.

On Sunday he will be in Victoria, speaking at St. Aidan's United Church at 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. and at Metropolitan United at 7:30 p.m.

In the afternoon he will lead a workshop in the lounge of First United Church, from 2-7 p.m. Registration $2, bring bag lunch, tea and coffee provided. For information, phone Rev. Geoffrey Smith, 598-6170.

Meditation offered

The Victoria Sri Chinmoy Centre will offer three series of weekly lectures on introductory meditation, starting next week.

The centre, one of 15 in major cities throughout Canada and the United States, offers the courses free.

Students feel they get a good intellectual foundation and plenty of practice and assistance from experienced teachers. The course includes a variety of meditation techniques.

It is designed to build the capacity to meditate gradually, step by step. At the end of the course, the students have a practical understanding of the role of meditation, and a good deal of experience behind them.

Reserve alive with Council Fire

The Cowichan Indian Reserve "came alive" over the Labor Day weekend, as more than 120 people of diverse racial backgrounds gathered for the second annual Council Fire sponsored by the Baha'i Faith.

Several carloads of people from the Makah tribe at the Neah Bay Reserve in Washington drove up for the event, and two planeloads of guests flew down from the north — one from Alaska and one from Prince Rupert. There were people from Victoria, Duncan, Bowser, Port Alberni, Parksville, Qualicum Beach and Campbell River.

On Saturday, while speeches were being made, a cooking fire burned and smoke drifted up through an opening in the roof of the open air structure where the people had gathered. Ladies prepared fish, enough salmon for the evening meal. The fish was baked Indian-stlye on wire racks placed close to a glowing fire. When mealtime came, the salmon was served up with a large baked potato, fresh vegetable, salad, fruit and bannock.

Master of ceremonies for the two-day Council Fire was John Thomas of Duncan, a Nitinat Indian who will be teaching this fall in the linguistics program at UVic. Thomas told many of the old Indian stories passed on from generation to generation, stories that used animal characters to teach a moral. These stories were not unlike the fables of Aesop.

Fish baked Indian style

"All these stories teach the same thing," said Thomas. "Don't try to be anybody else. Be yourself."

A feature speaker at the Council Fire was Scott Tyler of the Neah Bay Indian reserve, who told of his recent six-week tour of Europe, touching many countries including Ireland, Germany, Austria and Switzerland. Tyler was one of four North American Baha'i Indians selected to make the trip in order to foster international understanding and brotherhood, a global undertaking of Baha'i around the world.

Tyler observed that teachings of international friendship, unity, brotherhood and justice as are contained in the Baha'i Faith are needed by all peoples today to help bring peace and order to a sorely tried world.

He later stepped in as drummer and singer for the Neah Bay dance group, and explained the meaning of each song before it was performed. Supporting the group were the mother and the two sisters of John Thomas, who later explained that because they recognized the whale symbol of their own clan on the costumes of the Neah Bay dancers, they felt moved to come forward and help them perform the dance.

Several Nitinat dances were also performed, to the delight of those attending.

Why is the Council Fire held? The Baha'is who sponsored it say the Council Fire is a chance to promote unity and understanding, and an appreciaiton of traditional culture and spiritual values.

CHURCH CHRONICLES

Play insight into Lord's world

Taproot Theatre Company will present the play The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe at 8 p.m. Friday at the Ephraim Evans Auditorium, Metropolitan United Church, Pandora at Quadra.

The play, inspired by the works of C.S. Lewis, is a delightful, high-powered insight into the world and our Lord.

Taproot Theatre Company is a Seattle-based ensemble of Christian actors and actresses with a mission of theatre. The goal is to produce a high quality of drama worthy of the blessings of the Creator.

Admission is by donation.

Algetha, staff soloist for the Robert Schuller Garden Grove Community Church of Southern California, will sing at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Oak Bay United Church, 1369 Mitchell.

Considered one of the best Christian singing talents in America today, she is featured soloist for the Robert Schuller Institute Hour of Power television program telecast throughout the U.S., Canada and Australia.

Algetha, a black woman, has been widely praised for her artistry, spirit and soul in conveying the gospel message in song.

Her performance promises an evening of entertainment and inspiration for the entire family. An offering will be taken.

●

The Master's Team, on tour across Canada from Wallaceburg, Ont., will be featured at Parkdale Evangelical Free Church, at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

This group is comprised of the Vannatto family quartet with Gloria Kellette at the piano. Also featured are acoustic, steel, and rhythm guitars, glockenspiel, clarinet, and accordion.

No admission charge. Freewill offering.

Rev. Bruce Molloy was guest speaker when the Vancouver Island presbyterial of the Presbyterian Women's Missionary Society held a rally at Knox Presbyterian, Sooke.

His subject was Contemporary China, the object of study of both men and women of five denominations this year. An informative and entertaining talk with accompanying slides reflected Molloy's first hand experience during his visit to China in 1977.

Judge Frances Elford spoke of her work in the Citizenship Court.

Mrs. W. G. Argyle of Nanaimo, presbyterial delegate to annual council of the Society in Toronto last May, gave her report.

Members from Nanaimo and Port Alberni were present and the four local Presbyterian churches were represented.

●

A service of intercession at 1:30 p.m. in the chapel, will be followed by a meeting at 2 p.m. in the lower church hall. Speaker is Ann Spicer.

The guild's theme for the coming year is the church's ministry to those with special needs, such as the elderly, the handicapped and shut-ins. This theme is in keeping with the guild's special aim to encourage the ministry of healing to obey Christ's commandment to "preach, teach and heal the sick."

Mrs. Spicer's talk will cover "the prism of healing."

Healing or wholeness does not concern just bodily ills. Anyone suffering from spiritual or emotional distress, loneliness or any other social handicap is not healthy or whole.

She is co-ordinator of volunteer services at Saanich Peninsula Hospital and is a director of the Bishop Cridge Centre. She is involved with the Victoria Churches Group Home Society and is chairman of the Social Action Committee of the Victoria Council of Churches.

The 148th semi-annual general conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) has been scheduled for next weekend in Salt Lake City, Utah.

All conference sessions will be conducted in the Tabernacle on Temple Square. Presiding at the world gathering of Mormon leaders, some from the Victoria area, will be President Spencer Kimball, 83, who is in his fifth year of directing the worldwide operation of the 4.2 million member church.

General sessions of the conference will be heard on some 150 radio stations and seen on at least 80 television stations around the world. Locally they will be televised on KIRO-7 Seattle.

The U.C.W. Presbyterial meets at 10 a.m. Friday, at Shawnigan Lake United Church. Phone 382-1157 regarding transportation. Please bring box lunch.

St. Alban's annual fall fair and tea will be held from 1-4 p.m. next Saturday in the church hall, Ryan at Belmont.

Admission, including tea, is $1 and there will be a door prize draw. The numerous stalls will include home baking, garden, books, white elephant and needlework.

The auction, introduced last year, will again feature several outstanding items.

St. Peter's Anglican Church, off Quadra on St. Peter's Road in Lake Hill, will hold its annual Fall Fun Fair from 1:15-4:15 p.m. next Saturday.

Home cooking, white elephant, needlework, garden produce, books and records will be for sale. There will be an afternoon tea and games and prizes for the entire family.

Organists choose new president

The college, with more than 1,300 members across Canada, was founded in 1909 to promote a high standard of organ playing and choral directing, as well as discussion and musical events.

Gerald Bales of Ottawa and Margaret Drynan of Oshawa were elected first and second vice-presidents. Carol Kessler of Toronto was elected secretary-treasurer.

Firm Veitch Denial He Courted Tories

Socred backbencher Elwood Veitch of Burnaby-Willingdon today said any suggestion he approached Vic Stephens about joining the Tory leader's party is "an absolute lie, pure and simple."

Although admitting he's a federal Conservative, Veitch said he has been a provincial Socred in Alberta and B.C. for 20 years, and has no intention of changing provincial party loyalty.

The issue arose during Friday's taping of the BCTV public affairs program Capital Comment to be aired Sunday. Stephens is the guest.

He was asked by a panelist if he is getting anywhere in his efforts to lure some of the more conservative Socred backbenchers to switch parties for the next provincial election. He also was asked if Veitch was one of the MLAs he was hoping to land.

Stephens replied he had talked with only two Socred MLAs.

One is Cyril Shelford of Skeena who has announced he will not seek re-election, and who Stephens says is far too valuable to lose from provincial politics.

But in the case of Veitch, the Tory leader told the panel it was he who approached Stephens.

When pressed for details, Stephens said they would have to come from Veitch.

Asked about the situation this morning, Veitch said:

"What! That's an absolute lie, pure and simple."

He said the only recent contact he's had with Stephens was a lunch which he said he arranged to straighten out a few problems with the Crown Corporations committee.

"If I was going to the Conservative party, you (the press) would be the first, or at least the second, to know about it," he said.

He said the provincial Conservative party at this time is nothing but a vote-splitter and this isn't good for the province.

He said most of the votes the Tories take will be from Socred candidates.

Veitch says he takes a conservative stand on most issues, but won't ever join the party provincially.

"I guess I better not have lunch with anyone anymore."

Administration Lecture

Dr. Alexander King, chairman of the International Federation of Institutes of Advanced Studies, will give a public lecture at 8 p.m. Thursday in Room 168 of University of Victoria's Elliott Building.

He is making a cross-Canada tour as the 1978 W. Clifford Clark Memorial Lecturer, sponsored by the Institute of Public Administration of Canada.

His topic will be: Change and Uncertainty — the Challenge to the Administration.

King is associate fellow at the Centre for the Study of Democratic Institutions at Santa Barbara, California.

He is also an adviser to the Ontario government.

King was director-general for scientific affairs at the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development until 1974 and has held a number of similar positions since that time.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Judge Harold Alder took a 57-year-old Sooke man's heart condition into consideration before handing out concurrent, nine-month sentences in provincial court Friday.

Louis John Kapitan, 2059 Kaltasin, who has had two open-heart operations, previously pleaded guilty to theft of a television set. He also entered a guilty plea Friday to theft of an auto in Courtenay two days earlier.

Crown counsel Richard Law told the court Kapitan rented a 1975 Oldsmobile Cutlass from Tilden Rant-a-Car in Courtenay on Aug. 12, telling the firm his car had broken down and he had to go to Gold River.

The vehicle, which belonged to Northgate Motors Ltd. in Courtenay, was to be returned by Aug. 15, Law said, and it was reported stolen Aug. 22.

The car was eventually found in St. Paul, Minn.

On the television set theft, Law said Kapitan met an acquaintence in Victoria on Aug. 16 and asked for a place to stay for a few days.

The following morning, at about 11 a.m., Law continued, the two men went to the Douglas Hotel beer parlor. But Kapitan said he left his wallet at the house and went back to get it. Upon returning to the beer parlor, Kapitan said he had to pick up a cheque at B.C. Hydro.

After waiting several hours, the companion finally went home and discovered his television was gone.

The set was found pawned at Universal Trading, Law said.

Law recited a record for Kapitan dating back to Dec. 30, 1949, which included convictions for false pretences, forgery, uttering forged documents, fraud and two counts of auto theft.

Defence lawyer Robert Salmond said his client had no excuse for his actions and wanted to "clean the whole mess up."

Because of Kapitan's heart operations he "may not have too long to live," Salmond said.

"Well, Mr. Kapitan," the judge said, "You're not even a successful crook."

Edmond Joseph White, defended by Lenore Boyes, elected trial by judge without jury and was released on $2,000 recognizance.

A preliminary hearing was set for March 6.

* * *

Defence lawyer Barry Mah Ming elected trial by judge without jury and waived the preliminary hearing.

* * *

He was released on his undertaking to appear and remanded to next Friday for election of his trial method and plea.

* * *

Bruce Darryl Unrau, 1655 Chambers, was fined a total of $400 after pleading guilty to four counts of filing false claims for unemployment insurance benefits.

Crown counsel Harold Turnham told the court Unrau made claims from June 4 to July 22 stating he wasn't working when, in fact, he was employed and earning $208 a week.

Turnham said Unrau earned $1,600 during the period and was overpaid $721 in UIC benefits.

* * *

Fined for drinking-driving were: Russell Keith Durocher, 20, of 2733 Blackwood, $400; Kenneth Robinson, 30, of 1660 Cedar, $400; and Paul Charles, 34, of 3358 East Sooke, $200.

In addition, Charles was ordered to perform 50 hours of community service work.

Rink Bottle-Thrower Gets Discharge

VANCOUVER (CP) — Darrell Wayne Smith, 22, was given a nine-month conditional discharge in provincial court Thursday for throwing a 12-ounce liquor bottle on Pacific Coliseum ice during a junior hockey playoff game last April.

Court was told earlier that Smith, a Prince George pipefitter, told police he was acting on a dare when he threw the bottle that led to a charge of possession of a dangerous weapon.

Judge Gerald Coultas said the sentence was unusual but took into consideration that Smith had been drinking at the time of the incident and that he told the policeman who apprehended him in the parking lot that he was sorry.

Constable John Gowlyk said he saw Smith run out of the building after a bottle, thrown from the mezzanine section of the stands, crashed on the ice, narrowly missing a linesman and a player for Victoria Cougars.

The incident took place during a Western Hockey League playoff game April 15 won 8-3 by New Westminster Bruins.

B.C. Bars Ottawa Aid for Band

VANCOUVER (CP) — Indians of the Ingenika band, living in a remote community on the north arm of Williston Lake in central British Columbia, have been offered help by the federal government, but have been told by the provincial government they cannot accept the offer.

Vancouver lawyer Ian Waddell, who acts for the band, said Friday the band is the victim of a senseless bureaucratic runaround which will cause much hardship this winter.

The band has been promised Canada Works project funds to build log cabins in a camp the Indians moved to six years ago after the flooding of the Finlay River by the W. A. C. Bennett hydroelectric dam in 1967.

However, the grant is subject to approval by the B.C. forest service and the service told the band the project conflicts with forest planning for the area.

A letter from forestry officials at Prince George also said it would not be appropriate to spend public funds on the settlement pending the gazetting of a reserve for the group, which numbers about 150.

Waddell said that there are already some rough houses, a school, church and a trading post there.

The letter from forestry officials referred to negotiations for a reserve, but Waddell said the Indians have built the community and set out traplines in the last sizeable valley spared from the Finlay flood.

The community is beyond the end of the road from Mackenzie and navigation on the lake is not safe because it is clogged with submerged timber and deadheads.

Waddell also said the forest service regards the Indians as squatters, although the Indians were displaced by the flooding.

Waddell said in a letter to a Vancouver newspaper that for 160 years the band traded furs at Fort Graham, which now is under 60 metres of water.

The cabins and traplines were flooded and the Indians relocated on a desolate reserve near Mackenzie, 300 kilometres to the south, with compensation from B.C. Hydro of $23,325 or about $150 each.

The idea was that the Indians would become millworkers but six years ago the community decided to go back to the bush at Ingenika.

Settlers, Indians Stung Over Oil

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Settlers who moved in on a former Indian reserve near this northeastern British Columbia community got a pittance for rights the government gave to oil and gas developers, while the companies drilled wells that brought in more than half a billion dollars, provincial records show.

The records indicate the federal government missed out on at least $50 million in royalties through a book error.

The chiefs of the Doig River and Blueberry Indian bands have filed a lawsuit against the federal government, charging breach of trust, breach of treaty and fraud in the surrender in 1945 of 18,156 acres 65 kilometres north of here.

There now are 14 producing oil wells and seven natural gas wells in the area. It is also one of the prime exploration targets in the province for this winter's drilling season, for which a record 120 rigs now are gearing up throughout B.C.'s northeast.

On May 13, 1948, the Indian affairs department, which held the land in trust for the Indians of the former St. John Beaver band, who had lived there until the surrender in 1945, transferred ownership of the land to the director of the Veterans Land Act.

The VLA had paid $70,000 for all rights to the land, including surface and sub-surface minerals. That same day, the VLA registered its ownership and a subdivision plan that divided the former reserve into 31 lots.

The normal procedure in the registration of Crown-owned land that is intended for sale to private individuals is that the deed to the land specify retention of mineral rights by the Crown.

But the May 13, 1949 documents made no reference to the mineral rights. The veterans who eventually bought the land became the only Canadians to receive mineral rights from the Crown in this century.

The lawsuit filed this week claims that the Indian affairs department was to retain the mineral rights in trust for the Indians. The royalties alone could have earned the department more than $50 million.

The veterans purchased their land through the Soldiers Settlement Act, which provided for easy payment at low interest rates. The VLA retained title until the agreements were paid off, because they were bought by way of agreement for sale.

The area's oil and gas potential had been known since before the war, although exploration was delayed until the early 1950s.

Sun Oil Co. of Vancouver launched a mineral leasing program in the area in 1950. Within a year, public documents show, it covered most of the area with 10-year leases at a total cost of $8,000 — with no provision for royalties if anything was found.

Because the VLA was the registered title holder, the leases were between Sun Oil and the VLA. The VLA in turn had the veterans sign consent forms which allowed the VLA to accept the lease proceeds and apply them against the veterans' debts.

Forest Act Criticized

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ian Mahood, past president of the British Columbia Truck Loggers Association, said Friday that the provincial government's Forestry Act is allowing multi-national companies to take over management of the resource.

Mahood also told a seminar of forest industry officials that those firms have withdrawn their cash and profits to invest elsewhere and new forest legislation is needed to create a balanced industry.

OBSTRUCTION CHARGES LAID

LANGLEY (CP) — Two men were charged here Friday with attempting to obstruct justice by trying to dissuade a witness from testifying in a heroin importing and trafficking conspiracy case.

Police said Glen Jones, a Crown witness due to testify in a preliminary hearing now in progress at nearby Cloverdale, was threatened with violence if he gave evidence.

Frank Edward Barker, 45, of Langley and Raul Joseph Parral, 38, of Paramount, Calif., appeared in provincial court and were remanded in custody for a bail hearing.

Barker is one of six men charged with conspiring to import and traffic in heroin. Four others are charged with conspiring to traffic in heroin. Charges involve about 22.5 kilograms of Mexican brown heroin worth $37 million.

Ski Resort Plan Opposed

PENTICTON (CP) — A group opposing the proposed development of a ski resort at nearby Brent Mountain has sent a petition to Premier Bill Bennett calling on the provincial government to set aside the area as a wilderness ecological reserve or as parkland.

The petition, organized by the Save Brent Mountain Committee and bearing more than 700 signatures, said the area is the last unspoiled alpine mountain in the Okanagan.

Committee spokesman Katy Madsen said the ski development would cause irreparable damage to the area, 12 kilometres northwest of here.

She said many organizations and concerned individuals have been pressing the government for 12 years to preserve Brent Mountain because of its unique and rare combinations of arid interior and wet coastal plants.

More petitions still circulating will also be sent to the premier and the ministers, she added.

Madsen said the committee has complimented the provincial environment ministry for its comprehensive study of the ski resort proposal done by Al Raine, the province's ski area consultant.

The problems raised in the report include road access, possible interference with the Penticton Indian Band's water supply and the concern that another resort would fragment the local ski market.

Jim Gordon, the lawyer for developer Heinz Strege, said he has contacted the forestry ministry to ask that no decision be taken on the issue until the company has an opportunity to reply to some of the problems mentioned.

He said it is his understanding that the ministry has agreed to this request.

Gibraltar Mine Talks Last Only One Day

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations aimed at ending a shutdown of the Gibraltar mine in Williams Lake have broken off after one day of discussions, Placer Development Ltd., which operates the mine, said Friday.

Mediator Ken Albertini had set up the talks in an effort to end a four-month lockout of 400 workers at the Cariboo copper mine.

The dispute has resulted in secondary picketing at Endako Mines at Fraser Lake in central B.C., also operated by Placer.

Placer said in a news release Albertini had set up the talks with two conditions—that the company improve the offer to members of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers, and that the union take the offer to the members.

The statement said the wage offer was increased but the union refused to take it to the membership.

Union regional vice-president Peter Cameron said, however, that the company didn't make an offer Friday because it wanted an agreement from the union first that the offer would be voted on by all employees at the mine, not just union members.

Cameron said there were 400 workers at the mine at the beginning of the lockout, but only 95 now are paid-up members of the union because many have sought other jobs.

He said the union will apply to the provincial Labor Relations Board on Monday for a decision on what the union called two violations by the company of the labor code.

"The company is interfering in the internal affairs of the trade union," said Cameron. "And the company is erecting an unreasonable roadblock to achieving a collective agreement."

The major issues in the contract dispute are non-wage monetary items and the company's desire to buy out a training clause in the previous contract, which expired last Feb. 28.

Current base rate at Gibraltar is $6.11 an hour, while the tradesmen's rate is $8.11.

Independents To Get Logs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Independent loggers will get a chance at any surplus timber areas that are reclaimed from others who don't make full use of them, Forests Minister Tom Waterland told a seminar Friday on the province's new Forest Act.

Other timber also will be made available to them through the Crown's plans for intensive forest management programs, he added.

Waterland's statements came in response to questions from Dave O'Connor, president of the Truck Loggers Association which sponsored the meeting.

"What exactly is this government's forest policy?" O'Connor asked during the morning session. "It is to forever protect the eight multinationals or to open up surpluses to independent Canadians?"

Since the new Forest Act was introduced in May, truck loggers and others have complained that it shuts them off from an adequate timber base while the large integrated companies have access to 90 per cent of Crown land.

O'Connor and Ian Mahood, another association member, said Friday that the B.C. government's recent approval of two sales of forest operations indicates no change in its favorable treatment of the multinationals, noting Weyerhaeuser Canada Ltd.'s purchase of three sawmills in the Okanagan, which a group of local independents attempted to block, and the awarding to a Japanese-backed firm a large timber base along the mid-coast.

"The objective of this government is to encourage and open up surpluses to entrepreneurs," Waterland said after giving his luncheon speech. "But we also need the large international companies and I have nothing against them as long as they are responsible.

"Our definition of utilization is to harvest timber and if it can't be used, to deliver it to the logging market."

He said that the Japanese bid for the mid-coast timber rights was chosen from various others, mostly from multinationals, because it was the highest.

In the new act, independent contractors have been given the right to harvest half of the annual cut allowed on Crown land licensed to logging companies.

R. B. Fisher, chairman of the Council of Forest Companies of B.C., said he has mixed feelings about this clause, even though his company uses contractors exclusively.

O'Connor replied that the independents needed the assurance of work that the contractor clause supplies, and is upset at opposition to it from some timber holders "who in the past have been very uncooperative and mercenary."

He estimated that because the contractor clause only applies to Crown land, contractors will be responsible for harvesting about only 35 per cent of all timber cut in the province.

LANDLORD ACQUITTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — City landlord Alex DiCimbriani, 46, charged with assaulting a tenant by shoving a letter opener in his mouth, was found not guilty Friday in provincial court.

DiCimbriani was accused of assaulting Albert Montana, 56, March 15 when he arrived to collect a $50 damage deposit.

Judge Gerald Coultas said he dismissed the case because the Crown had failed to prove DiCimbriani guilty of common assault beyond reasonable doubt.

B.C. Urges National Core Curriculum

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia will ask the Council of Ministers of Education of Canada in Quebec City next week to study development of a national core curriculum, Education Minister Pat McGeer said Thursday.

He said B.C. is making the recommendation to seek standardization across the country in fundamental areas such as two national languages, reading, writing, science, mathematics and Canadian history and geography.

"Also, by commissioning national textbooks in Canada to suit the core curriculum, it would no longer be necessary as it is now for us to rely on American and other foreign textbooks," McGeer said.

McGeer also said B.C. wants the ministers to consider establishing a Canadian academic awards council which would review academic offerings at post-seondary institutions other than universities and certify programs as being up to an acceptable national standard.

The minister told a news conference that no response is expected on B.C. proposals until the council meets in January. If the council approves the proposals, they would not be binding on local school boards.

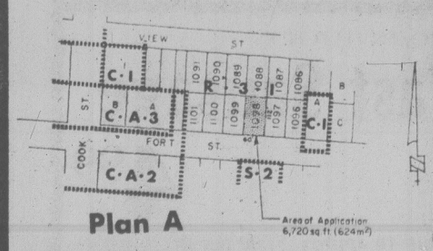
Corporation of The City of Victoria

NOTICE OF HEARING

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that all persons deeming their interest in the property affected by the following matters will be afforded an opportunity to be heard before City Council at a Public Hearing to be held in the Council Chamber, City Hall, On THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, at 7:30 p.m.

Re: "LAND USE CONTRACT (1144-46 FORT STREET) BYLAW" (APC #1835)

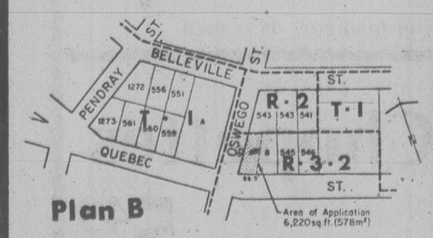
This bylaw authorizes a Land Use Contract between the Corporation of the City of Victoria and Barbon & Hodgson Ltd. in respect of certain lands at 1144-46 Fort Street, legally described as Lot 1098, Victoria City, EXCEPT the Southerly 8 feet thereof taken for road purposes. The Contract enables the owner to use the building thereon for the purpose of offices other than those of the medical profession or occupations providing any form of health care.



Plan A

Re: "LAND USE CONTRACT (402 QUEBEC STREET) BYLAW" (APC #1829)

This bylaw authorizes a Land Use Contract between the Corporation of the City of Victoria and Harry Loucas in respect of certain lands at 402 Quebec Street, legally described as Parcel A (DD 46702-I) of Lot 544, Victoria City. The Contract enables use of the lands for the removal thereto of a house formerly the residence of the late Chief Justice Hunter and for its use as a residence and for restaurant purposes.



Plan B

to amend the Development Permit Bylaw by prescribing a form of development permit.

Copies of the draft bylaws may be inspected in the Douglas Street foyer, City Hall, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. any day City Hall is open for business prior to the hearing. Further enquiries should be directed to the Department of Community Development, Tel: 385-5711, Local 290.

Pop That Perrier With $45 Opener

By ENID NEMY
New York Times

NEW YORK - The truly prescient retailer knows what you want before you know you want it.

For instance, if you're a Perrier drinker, you probably think life is complete if there is fizz in the bottle, and a slice of lime in the glass. That is, of course, after you've lifted off the top with your dime-store opener. And if you don't finish the bottle at one sitting, you very likely take a dime-store stopper, seal up the fizz, and forget about the whole thing.

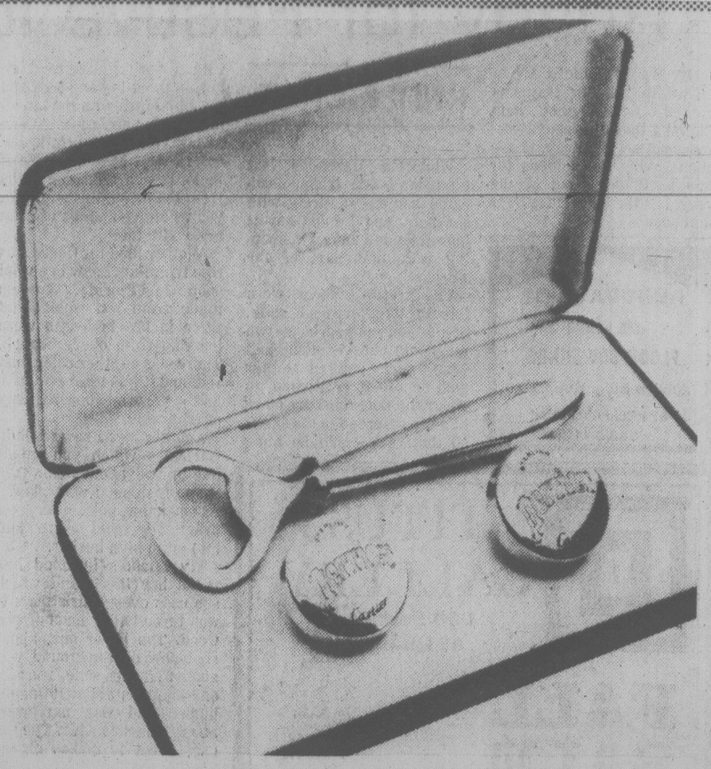
Which just goes to show why you'd be an absolute bust as a prescient retailer, and why Cartier has been in the retail business for more than a century. Cartier doesn't think small, or cheap, and before you know it, you aren't thinking small or cheap.

Cartier has managed to both salute the fashionable, fizzy soft drink, and whet (no pun intended) the interest of prospective buyers. The firm is introducing a deluxe, three-piece bottle opener and stopper set.

The set consists of a sterling silver bottle opener, loosely modeled after the shape of the Perrier bottle, but still classic in form (after all, enough is enough) and a pair of engraved bottle caps. The engravings spell out Perrier. The whole is packaged in Cartier's red presentation box.

To pose a question that may never be asked, why Cartier and Perrier? Perrier is made by a French firm that apparently has a history somewhat similar to that of Cartier. Both trace their beginnings to the middle of the 19th century, and to the patronage of Napoleon III, and both arrived in the United States in 1908.

There's little doubt that the store would be glad to take an order. That's assuming your credit is good for $45. Status, prestige and sterling don't come cheap.



DEPRESSION CAN BE HELPED

HAMILTON (CP) — Depression in old people often goes untreated because too many people consider it a natural part of aging, a geriatric psychiatrist said here.

Dr. John Roy of Brantford told a geriatric symposium that depression in the elderly is often looked on as senility when actually it is a treatable disease.

Elderly people should be educated about depression because they tend to accept society's view that it is something that comes with aging, he said.

Dr. Roy pointed out that while people over 65 make up only 10 per cent of the population, they account for 25 per cent or more of suicides.

Dr. Jack Greener of Hamilton Psychiatric Hospital said electro-shock therapy can help an older person whose depression is so severe he is considering suicide.

Forests cover almost half of Canada's total area. About half of this forest land contains saleable wood — some eight per cent of the world's total timber resources.

Since forest products add over $3 billion to our export trade, they are of the utmost importance to every Canadian.

The four-page Fact Sheet Forestry and the Environment makes it very clear that the value of our forests cannot be measured in dollars and cents. Forests stabilize the flow of rivers and minimize flooding. They also provide a picturesque background for much of our recreational activities and shelter a vast variety of wildlife.

The leaflet also discusses the advantages and disadvantages of clearcutting — the removal of an entire crop in a given area, and of selective cutting — the cutting of only the best and biggest trees.

Furthermore, you will learn that each year insects kill about 250,000 acres of woodland and that forest fires cost Canadians $35 million annually. Trees may also be killed by air pollution, although most can stand injury for several years before they actually succumb.

To increase forest growth, fertilization has been introduced fairly recently. In Canada, between 5,000 and 15,000 acres are now treated every year. In addition, about four million acres have been artificially restocked. By 1985, this total will have grown to 10 million acres.

To obtain a copy of the four-page Fact Sheet, write to: Public Information Unit, Canadian Forestry Service, Environment Canada, Ottawa, Ont. K1A OH3. Please indicate your postal code and allow at least two-three weeks for delivery.

Working Moms Enjoy Jobs

By JEANNE LESEM

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new Nielsen survey indicates 97 per cent of U.S. working mothers like their jobs:

—Even though they still do most of the family's grocery shopping, cooking, cleaning, chauffeuring of children and bill paying;

—Even though 62 per cent earn less than $10,000 a year;

—And even though half of those earning under $10,000 a year hold service or clerical jobs that, historically, have not paid as well as professional or sales and managerial positions.

Twenty per cent of those surveyed had professional jobs; the remainder were sales-managerial or blue collar.

Forty per cent told polltakers they work mainly because their families need the money.

One-fifth said they work to earn money for extras for themselves and their families. Only 19 per cent said they worked mainly for personal fulfillment.

They feel they have more demands on their time than men who work. The survey figures confirmed this, although 92 per cent said their husbands share child-raising responsibilities and, overall, appear to be supportive of their wives' dual role.

Only 15 per cent said their husbands helped, compared with 23 per cent who said the children lent a hand.

Fifty-five per cent of the women questioned in the nation-wide study in July said they plan to continue working until they reach retirement age. That attitude appeared highest among women with higher educational backgrounds.

Other findings:

—84 per cent feel they are more stimulating persons because of the jobs and not bad mothers because they work; the same ratio said their husbands were interested in their work.

—And 61 per cent said working outside the home makes them more tolerant of their husbands and children.

For survey purposes, a working mother was profiled as a 25- to 49-year-old with an outside job, a husband employed full time and living at home and children under 18 years of age and living at home.

BUNNY TEETH NEED CHECK

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

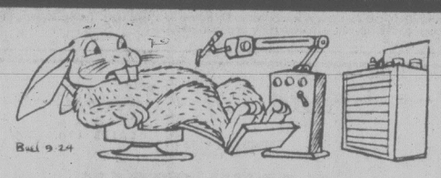
DEAR DR. MILLER: Do a rabbit's front teeth ever need to be shortened in any manner? I know those teeth are supposed to be long but Harvey's front teeth are ridiculous. — T.O.

DEAR T.O.: Normal nibbling naturally keeps those incisors worn down to an appropriate length, usually. In some cases, whether from improper diet or, more likely anatomically defective "dentures," those incisors may overgrow with potentially disastrous results. When they are overgrown, the rabbit may no longer be able to close its mouth and chew food. Unless the incisors are trimmed back to proper length, starvation will result. Whether Harvey is losing weight yet or not, the doctor should check him out to see what's up regarding those incisors and other teeth.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: I read when a parakeet won't eat you can pass a feeding tube into its stomach. How much concentrated food could you pour down through that tube? At one time, I mean. — F.E.

DEAR F.E.: One (1) cc.



Passing a stomach tube down a small bird is not a job for do-it-yourselfers however. The tube can easily puncture the esophagus or some other portion of the anatomy with fatal results.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is it safe to give petroleum jelly to a cat to help prevent hairballs? I have given mineral oil previously but I discovered on one occasion that she likes petroleum jelly. — L.M.

DEAR L.M.: Actually, the petrolatum is preferable as far as safety is concerned. The hairball preparation is best given between meals so that is causes less interference with digestion and assimilation of nutrients. Mineral oil given alone can be dangerous since it's tasteless and may flow into the windpipe instead of the esophagus before the cat is aware it is even there. A glob of petrolatum obviously couldn't cause this potentially dangerous predicament. (Should she drink the mineral oil, it wouldn't be hazardous from the standpoint of inhalation.0

DEAR DR. MILLER: On the 22nd, my dog, Spot, died. As does any 11-year-old, I cried. My parents said that crying wouldn't bring him back. I took their advice. I gave myself some advice, too. Now I'm passing it along: Talk about the dog and think about all the good times you had with him. Eventually you will forget all about the dog. Sincerely yours, — K.D.

DEAR K.D.: Thanks for the tearless but tender tip.

DEAR DR. MILLER: It's been almost a year since Hercules, my hamster, has been on this diet of wheat sprout bread and carrots. I've tried him on other stuff but he doesn't want it. He looks so good I guess I'm right in figuring he can get by on what he has been eating? — A.I.

DEAR A.I.: While the nutritional content of the bread would be the determining factor, odds are that combination is adequate. Herk's continued good health would seem to confirm this.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Once-in-a-lifetime opportunity . . .

If you love the look of Calvin Klein clothes . . . but have never been able to afford his low-keyed, high-priced things . . . now's your opportunity to acquire some at what amounts to a mere song . . . So get ready to start singing, all you smart women who long to own some of these elegant, easy-to-wear styles . . . because starting on Monday, Sept. 25 . . . Eaton's Signature Shop is clearing out its entire remaining stock of the Calvin Klein spring and summer line at less than half price! . . . There's a cotton damask group of tops and skirts . . . A cotton T-shirt group . . . Natural silk knits, and pure silk blouses and skirts . . . plus a couple of pure silk dresses . . . all of these in the natural, neutral colors which characterize Klein's elegant clothes . . . As we said, everything will be offered at below half price . . . Some of the tops will even have their price tags slashed down to $10! . . . And just to give you a "for instance" of other prices . . . we saw a gorgeous silk blouse besprinkled with misty flowerlets . . . was priced at $235 . . . but come next Monday it will go for $75! . . . Sizes range from 2 to 12 in all these things, but naturally they're broken . . . so if you want to get in on the bonanza, we suggest you be at Eaton's first thing on Monday . . . This is an honest-to-goodness, once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to obtain something from the prestigious designer whom Newsweek classifies as "One of the great forces in American fashion today" . . . at prices you wouldn't believe! . . . Eaton's Signature Shop, 382-7141, loc. 242.

Skirts and blouses are long on fashion . . .

Even women who've never been very keen on the skirt-and-blouse combination are changing their way of thinking this year! . . . The big selection of separate skirts now on hand at Wilson's . . . and the way people are snapping them up . . . made this very clear! . . . When we visited Wilson's last Monday, we were shown some new arrivals from France . . . 100% wool, fully lined skirts by Gerard Pasquier of Paris . . . in styles and color combinations we thought were exceptional! . . . One very slimming skirt in big, unusual plaid in greys and brown tones, is cut on the bias and softly pleated at the top . . . Priced at $115 . . . Another with unpressed pleats in front and one in the back, is a combination of plaid and stripes in blurry rust, grey and green . . . $75 . . . A third style has pleats all around, stitched over the hips for a nice sleek look . . . Green/camel/black and camel/black/burgundy . . . $100 . . . All of these have side pockets, and while colors differ, they're in basic, earthy tones. In sizes 8 to 16 . . . they're beautifully fitting and exemplify the new soft look in skirts . . . Some dainty blouses which complement them perfectly are made in the U.K. and have the Anna Roose label . . . They're gossamer fine, pure wool . . . handwashable . . . with tiny tucks down the front and down the sleeves . . . small silver buttons . . . Off-white, brown and black, tagged at $80 . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177 and 1210 Newport Ave., 592-2821.

We've been Barbizon fans since away back when . . . so when we learned this week that Impacts 'n' Imports is now carrying nighties and robes from this popular U.S. manufacturer it was by way of being a red letter day! . . . There's a delightful nightie and robe set in something called "Featheria flannel" . . . a polyester/cotton challis, sprinkled with blue flowers, soft as a kitten's ear . . . Nightie has long sleeves, wide lace at wrist and on yoke . . . Robe in the same material is quilted and lace trimmed . . . Plain robes in quilted, woven nylon . . . pink, blue or cream . . . have a beautiful cut . . . Not bulky or bunchy, they give a long, slim line, even while being loose and comfortable . . . A sort of rounded mandarin collar is touched with embroidey, and the gown zips right up the front . . . This is the kind of robe you'll adore . . . It's snag-proof and machine washable . . . Same style in a short, pink robe with cotton/polyester nightie to match . . . Quilted bed jackets in pink, blue and peach . . . A mint-green, long nightie with embroidered yoke and lace is in the cozy Featheria fabric . . . These things have just come in, and will be the only order between now until after Christmas, so if you're interested, we suggest you get in to see them fast! . . . Other much-wanted things we noticed . . . navy taff-knit slips in a whole range of sizes . . . A gorgeous peach satin and lace slip by Olga . . . with matching French panties . . . All these things come in on a quota system, so waste no time if you want something special! . . . Impacts 'n' Imports, 12 Centennial Square, 388-7023.

After all, it's only September, so we're going to resist the temptation to bring up the subject of Christmas . . . but there's a thought we'd like to plant in your mind right now because Bath & Kitchen's Great Fall Sale started a couple of days ago and continues until Oct. 7 . . . during which absolutely everything in the store will be sold at 20% off the regular price . . . The thought's this: Even if you've got every blessed thing you think you need for your bath and kitchen . . . (and we don't honestly believe anyone really has!) . . . there are numerous occasions throughout the year when gifts need to be bought . . . for weddings, showers, anniversaries, birthdays and . . . yes, we'll say it, Christmas . . . so why not do all your gift shopping now at B & K? . . . Not only have they a fantastic selection of things to choose from . . . in a tranquil, unhurried milieu, but you'll do all your gift shopping at substantial savings! . . . The sale covers every item in the store . . . all regular stock, no seconds . . . and includes newly arrived stock too . . . like the beautiful, new selection of bathrobes . . . Caulfeild for men, and Bard's for women . . . and the complete line of Lullabies slippers for both sexes! There's a vast selection of Martex, Cannon and Fieldcrest towels . . . Every type of bathroom and kitchen accessory you can possibly think of . . . And of course, B & K is famous for their shower curtains . . . with the largest selection West of Toronto . . . These make tremendous gifts! . . . Bath & Kitchen, James Bay Square, Simcoe and Menzies St., 385-2523.

Exclusive pantsuits at the Bay . . .

We know we've been talking up skirts for all we're worth . . . but don't think for a moment that pantsuits have had it! . . . Just newly arrived in the Bay's Mirror Room are some terrific pantsuits made especially for them . . . 100% wool, they consist of pants, mock turtleneck ribbed pullover, and either sleeveless vest or full jacket of real suede . . . Price of all of these is $150, but styles of jackets vary . . . One vest jacket buttons down the front and has elasticized waist . . . Another is punched suede with leather trim . . . There's a full jacket with wool back and suede panels in front . . . front zip . . . Another suede jacket is made like a cardigan with wool ribbing at the bottom . . . Still another is suede with leather trim and a lot of very nice detailing . . . Most of the jackets and vests have zippered fronts, and colors include light beige, mocha, camel, brown, black, maroon and blue . . . They're extremely smart, and we think the price is very good . . . There's another group of pantsuits with suede blazers, priced at $275 . . . Camel, beige and chocolate brown in these . . . We do recommend you pay an early visit to the Bay and have a look at these new things . . . because regardless of what else you have in your wardrobe, you'll want at least one smart pantsuit! . . . Look over the new skirts by Brendella too . . . Just arrived from Ireland, they're pure wool tweeds, checks and plaids . . . One style is full, another straight with inverted pleat back and front, and a third is A-line . . . $75 at . . . The Bay Mirror Room, 385-1311, Loc. 280.

You'll never meet yourself in Ilse's clothes! . . .

We wish we had a dollar for every request we get for the name of a really good dressmaker! . . . More women than we realize have figure problems . . . Too fat or too thin . . . Too tall or too short . . . And for them the answer is to have their clothes custom-made . . . If you fall into this category . . . If you'd like to have some of last year's clothes brought up to date . . . If you have your own ideas about what you want to wear, but can't find it in the stores . . . For any or all of these reasons we commend you to Ilse of Victoria . . . a dressmaker and designer who does absolutely beautiful work . . . Make an appointment with her and discuss your wardrobe needs . . . If you want clothes for the holidays or for travelling, you should be thinking about them now because styles have changed so much this year, and you won't be able to use too many of the old unless you have them altered . . . Ilse will do this for you, as well as making you new things . . . Perhaps you've bought some beautiful fabrics during your travels and still have it lying around . . . It should be used because, like most things in this world, it can deteriorate with time . . . So take it in to Ilse and have her make it into one of the new short cocktail dresses or whatever . . . Or if you've a nice separate jacket, have her make you a skirt to blend in . . . We know you'll be delighted with anything Ilse does for you! . . . In her shop she sells blouses, scarves, evening bags, belts, costume jewellery . . . everything you need to accessorize your new custom-made clothes . . . Make an early appointment with . . . Ilse of Victoria & Vienna Dirndl Shop, 1306 Government St., 386-9722.

Three major changes at Standard Furniture . . .

Some exciting "happenings" have been taking place at Standard Furniture in the past couple of weeks . . . and while we knew about one of them, the other two sort of snuck up on us! . . . Happening No. 1 is that you can buy a piano or organ at Standard! . . . They now have the famous line of Baldwin pianos and organs, situated at the back on the main floor . . . and among the conventional pianos and organs, there's an exciting little "Fun Machine" . . . a miniature organ you can do practically anything with! . . . All the features of a big organ . . . (We know somebody who's thinking of buying one for his boat!) . . . Do go in and have a look at it! . . . Secondly, Jordan's Rugs are moving into the 5th floor . . . and Standard are really proud of this because they feel Jordan's offer such excellent service and quality of carpeting, as well as of area rugs . . . Lastly, on the main floor, next to the Import Shop, Singer Sewing Machines have set up a sales and service department . . . So you can now buy your new machine at Standard . . . or the various machine accessories and things you need to keep it up to scratch! . . . With this wider range of services, Standard is now giving people more reasons than ever to shop in their big, exciting store! . . . One more thing . . . now's the time to get your home fixed up for winter . . . and Standard's own Design Service is ready and anxious to help you! . . . If you'd like one of their designers to call at your home, phone Design Services at . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

Ready for Festive Ideas?

KNIT & CHAT

By MAY E. MacLEAN

Now that Labor Day has passed, one cannot help thinking that the festive season is not too far away. I have been saving these ideas for this particular time of the year, as they are ideas for that season.

While in Barbados last Christmas, one friend decorated her tree entirely with seashells and I must say it looked unique and so in keeping with that part of the world.

The prettiest shells were left in their natural state. Some had a pearl or two glued into a curve; others had been spray-painted either gold or silver, I was told, to cover the defects. Tiny holes had been pierced in the shells so that they could be hung with a very fine thread allowing them to hang free and twist and turn with the movement of the air.

It was one of the prettiest of trees that I have seen. So if junior has carted home shells from the beach this summer, you will have an idea of what to do with them.

Another idea for Christmas tree trimming I saw in a wool shop in Florida. Tassels made from red wool about three inches in length were hanging from every branch. There was no other color, just red, and it was most effective and a very inexpensive way of trimming.

Another idea I saw while in Barbados which you might like to hear about was a tree shape fashioned with plants. As you know, poinsettas grow practically wild there and into quite high bushes.

My friend's husband had made her this stand which she uses every Christmas. It was three half-rounds of plywood. The lower one, about six inches off the ground, was about 22 inches wide. The second one was about 10 inches higher and was narrower, about 16 inches wide. The top one, about 10 inches higher again, was only about eight inches wide.

This week's pattern is a big, roomy bag with the sabots to match. Crocheted with a double strand of fairly heavy cotton which will work up very quickly, the bag can be made to match any outfit. The piece for the sabots is just a straight strip across the instep. If you have ever owned a pair of sabots, you'll know how comfortable they are. I wouldn't part with mine. A bold, effective crochet stitch is used throughout, one that even a beginner can try.

To order Leaflet No. 7868, send 75 cents, plus a stamped, self-addressed return envelope. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to May E. MacLean, Knit and Chat, c/o Box A, 486 Montford Dr., Dollard des Orneaux, Que.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery.

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- If you allow personal family problems to get the best of you you'll be sorry for weeks to come.

11-15 Positive Cycle- Your positive position will open your mind to the easiest ways of accomplishing your long-range goals.

A knowledge of your intellectual Bio-dex can be a real help in school. Use low days to do reading and research for your projects. Then, when your intellectual Bio-dex is high (around 4 or 5 points), put your thoughts together and complete your final copy. Taking advantage of your natural biorhythm cycles can really help your grades.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- It's very important right now to speak clearly and be to-the-point. Don't play games with others.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- Avoid big words designed to impress. Be yourself and you'll be better liked and appreciated.

11-15 Positive Cycle- Your consideration towards others will develop in a form that will bring rewards in the near future.

Computing the Bio-dex of military leaders at decisive moments in history is fascinating, and it's amazing how often the winning general has favorable biorhythms. Many historians claim that the Battle of Dorchester Heights, which forced the British out of Boston, was the turning point for the American Revolution. George Washington achieved this brilliant victory when his Bio-dex was at a triple high 15 points!

Pain in Back No. 2 on List

MONTREAL (CP) — Low back pain ranks second only to a headache as the most common type of pain, says Dr. John Loeser of University of Washington.

Common causes of low back pain are muscle strain and degeneration of discs in the back, which serve as cushions between the bones, Loeser told an international conference on pain held here recently.

"The vast majority of people will get better with nothing other than rest and relaxation. Most back pain is something that doesn't need fancy treatment."

There are between 200,000 and 400,000 operations annually to repair "slipped" discs in the United States. Loeser said he thinks that is too many and said, "Most people will get better without surgery. What surgery does is hasten a recovery process."

Discs, shaped like hockey pucks, are located between bones in the spine. When they "slip," the gelatinous material in their interior travels to the discs' outside rims, putting pressure on nerves above them. This causes leg and back pain.

Loeser hailed as a breakthrough a recently-developed surgical method to treat slipped discs. Dr. Harold Goald, a neurosurgeon at Jefferson Memorial Hospital in Virginia, has reported a 96-per-cent success rate in treating almost 300 patients for slipped discs.

Goald's patients, who ranged in age from 19 to 89, had been referred to him after undergoing a range of conventional treatments — from physiotherapy to muscle relaxants. But the treatments had not worked and all were in severe pain.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Our 24-year-old daughter, Debbie, has been living in New York for a year. Debbie is a sensible, educated, single woman who has an excellent position. She's told us that she's romantically involved with John, a 33-year-old professional man. She says he is an outstanding person with fine qualities. They are not engaged, but he's the first man she's ever been serious about. Our only objection to this match is that John is not of our religion.

Debbie phoned to tell us that John's mother called her and offered to pay her air fare to meet John's father, who is dying of cancer. They've never met Debbie, but have spoken to her on the phone often. John's mother said she felt that her husband would die happier knowing that his only son was going with a lovely girl.

Because my husband and I disapprove of our daughter's involvement with a man not of our faith, we told Debbie that we did not want her to go. Do you think we were wrong?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Yes. a 24-year-old woman with your daughter's qualifications is capable of making her own decisions (including whom she should marry), and for you to put the kibosh on that trip for any reason was wrong. Whether or not Debbie and John marry, if she can make a dying man happy I think she should go. And I hope she does.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are finally being divorced after 12 years of a very stormy marriage and several separations.

My lawyer instructed me to move out of the house, so I did. The problem is that every time I go to the house to talk to my wife about some matter pertaining to the settlement, one thing leads to another and I end up sleeping there. (With her).

It's ridiculous the way I go out and move the car so nobody will see it parked in front of the house all night.

Aren't we legally married until the divorce decree is final? If so, aren't we entitled to sleep together if we feel like it?

Please don't tell me that if we still want to sleep together we should consider saving our marriage. She is impossible to live with, and she says the same about me, but I must admit sex with her is the best. Do you think we're crazy? — BEING HONEST

DEAR HONEST: No I think you're wise to recognize the fact that sexual compatability isn't everything. But if you want to know if you're entitled to marital privileges until your divorce is final, ask your lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: This is my second letter to you. I wrote to you 20 years ago asking your advice about marrying a man 17 years older than myself. I was 25 at the time and Mel was 42.

You wrote back and said, "There are no rules about age. Some people are 'old' at 30, and others are 'young' at 60. It all depends on their health, attitude and outlook."

Well, I felt that Mel was young at 42, so I married him. We will celebrate our 20th wedding anniversary next week and couldn't be happier. Oh, yes, we have two fine sons, 16 and 18, of whom we are very proud.

I thought you'd enjoy knowing how your advice turned out. Thanks, Abby. I sure do owe you a lot.—MEL'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: You owe me nothing. Your letter made my day. Thanks for writing, and congratulations!

Plant Beds Need Some Attention

GARDENING
jack beastall

Certain planting areas in the home garden are known as beds and borders, terms which originated in the early days of gardening and applied to the long wide borders of herbaceous perennials and large circular beds used in landscaping private estates and public parks.

In the gardens of today a bed is more likely to be a small area in the centre of a lawn or a tiny dooryard area, while a border is often an 18-inch strip along the fence lines of a 60-ft. lot.

A bed may contain a planting of ornamental trees and shrubs instead of herbaceous perennials, and shrubs can also be the feature of the borders.

Regardless of what plants may occupy these areas a certain amount of work done on them during the last weeks of summer goes a long way towards a neat appearance over fall and winter and lessens the work needed in spring when most home gardeners find more than enough jobs to fill the few spare hours available for gardening.

Throughout the summer hundreds of species of native plants have been producing seeds. These have been spread by air currents, carried on the fur coats of domestic pets, on the clothes and boot soles of humans. The seeds of berry fruits have been distributed by birds which frequented the shrubs and trees in the garden.

The small amount of rain, which is usual here during the last few days of August and the first few in September, has been enough to cause germination of thousands of these recently deposited seeds.

At present they are innocent little seedlings which the gardener overlooks. By Christmas the two little leaves of native grasses can be a plant three to four inches in diameter with thirty leaves or more and by spring, a clump needing lifting with a fork.

A Canada thistle, now only two inches high and easily pulled from the soil, will have a deep root in six months time and the tiny burdock seedling a deep tapered root, which, if broken, will put up shoots for years.

These examples clearly show that the time to deal with weeds is while they are seedlings, and the most effective tools are the push hoe and the four-tined cultivator sold as a manure drag.

Although there is plenty of planting, dividing, and replanting to be done this month, a half hour spent running the hoe and cultivator over the beds and borders is an investment which gives good returns.

If the job is to be a pleasure, as it should be, and consume the minimum effort, the blade of the push hoe must be sharp and clean. A few minutes touching up the blade with a file and cleaning off rust with sandpaper or emery cloth could save an hour or so on the job.

One thing to remember is that no gardener or other person has yet been able to educate a hoe blade to distinguish between a weed and a desirable plant. Exercise care when working on weed seedlings which are near to plant stems.

The same applies to the pronged cultivator. Don't work deeply into the soil over root areas, especially near plants with shallow or surface roots.

In this climate it is necessary to rake up weed seedlings and not leave them on the soil. Many newcomers have discovered our weeds have the bad habit of taking root again if not collected and put on the compost heap.

This weeding of beds and borders may have to be repeated several times in the next three months as fresh seeds germinate, but it is a job to do in spare moments when the desire to be outdoors is too strong to overcome and the body is not in tune with heavy work. In other words, it is a good excuse to get outside.

As soon as these appear it is wise to scrape the mulch aside and dig down as deep as possible to remove the roots, taking care not to damage plant roots.

If the tops are just pulled off, the roots will obey the basic law of pruning; the more you prune the more growth you get in return.

Weed seeds are distributed over a mulch the same as over other parts of the garden, and will germinate as soon as the seeds have absorbed sufficient moisture.

These weed seedlings are easily removed by hand, a job that should be attended to as soon as the seedlings are noticed.

Several commercial landscaping jobs where bark was used as a mulch two or three years ago are now a bed of weeds because no one was responsible for removing the seedlings when they first appeared. Allowing these drifted seeds to take over defeats the purpose for which the bark was used, and the cost of the bark is no longer an investment paying an annual dividend.

Bark is the outer covering of tree trunks and contains various substances which prevent disease germs and atmospheric conditions from harming the vital tissues of the plants.

Both the bark and kelp mulch and the bark chip mulch have been found beneficial to the covered soil and to the plants around which the mulches have been spread.

Apparently the protective substances in the bark are still active and have some effect on disease spores, certain insects, as well as protecting the soil from scorching sun and beating rain.

Plants mulched with the finely ground kelp and bark put out under the trade name Seaforest, were not damaged by the large species of slugs although many of them were present in the mulch.

Reasons for this condition have been advanced, the general opinion being the slugs found food in the mulch that was more to their liking than plant tissues.

In addition to benefiting the plants and the soil, a bark mulch, either chips or finely ground, looks natural on a bed or border filled with plants.

There is a neatness about it that suits most temperaments, and a warmth in its soft brown color that is lacking when gravel or round boulders are used.

If you are thinking of investing in a bark mulch, be sure to cultivate the beds and borders frequently to bring dormant weed seeds to the surface for germination and destroy the seedlings before applying the mulch.

Lacking such a mulch, the sharp clean blade of the push hoe will keep the beds and borders orderly throughout the year.

WEEK'S WORK

Plant late-flowering bulbs between wallflowers if wanted at same time; or use early varieties if bloom is wanted earlier.

Keep faded flowers cut from all perennials to bring along further bloom; cut old flowers from dahlias and chrysanthemums.

Prune summer heathers without further delay; fall bloomers are not cut back until spring.

As vegetables are finished in rows, remove old plants to compost heap, chopping in small pieces to hasten rotting. Rough dig the soil to allow rain to penetrate to the dry depths.

Lift potatoes if tops have died down. Leave late plantings if green until October or even November if weather is good.

B.C. Gov't Investigating Seaweed Farming Business

MALCOLM ISLAND, B.C. (CP) — A seaweed-harvesting machine is plying ocean waters near here as part of a provincial government program to study the potential of developing a seaweed industry on the British Columbia coast within a few years.

Since 1974 the provincial government has given about $400,000 in grants to investigate the new industry which could have an estimated annual gross of $9 million when it is developed.

"I think we can provide some good economic development and employment opportunity," Michael Coon, head of seaweed research for the provincial marine resources branch, said recently.

The bright-green seaweed machine, bought second-hand this year from a California company for $42,000, is a major boost for the team of six biologists studying commercial development of seaweed.

Researchers consider the kelp bed, about five kilometres off the north-east coast of Vancouver Island, to be one of the best in B.C.

"We now have an inventory of most of the major stocks of kelp on the British Columbia coast," Coon said in an interview, adding there is probably enough to support an industry.

Other seaweeds would have to be farmed because there are insufficient wild stocks.

A recent survey shows there are good market prospects in North America and the Orient for kelp and other seaweeds, with demand greatly exceeding supplies.

Kelp meal is used in health foods because of its high nutritional value. One chemical byproduct called algin sells for from $4.50 to $6.50 a kilogram and is used as an emulsifier in foods such as ice cream and salad dressing.

Coon estimated that the international seaweed byproducts industry grosses $500 million annually and edible seaweed, consumed mainly in the Orient, grosses $750 million annually.

He said companies involved in seaweed harvesting in the U.S. are owned by multi-national corporations, but he forsees a cottage-style industry for B.C.

Seaweed farming could be handled by families or co-operatives, Coon said, adding that fish processers now are eyeing the potential industry.

Coon said he would like to see the provincial government limit its involvement in the industry to research and grants for people wanting to harvest or farm seaweed.

Some fishermen fear that removing the seaweed will damage their livelihood because salmon are known to swim along the edge of kelp beds.

Coon said a four-man team from the University of B.C. is studying the effect of harvesting on salmon, herring and abalone and will try to develop harvesting strategies that will not harm the fish.

"The whole reason for our work is to make sure that (the seaweed) lasts forever," Coon said. "Like a forest, if you over-harvest, it takes longer for it to grow back."

Mutual Funds Rising

EDMONTON (CP) — Canadians are taking a stronger interest in investment funds, says Keith Douglas, president of the Investment Funds Institute of Canada.

Average public investment in the funds at June 30, 1978, was $4,246 per capita, Douglas said in an interview.

A trend is developing, he said, which shows a rise in sales and a drop in redemptions.

While part of the change in pattern reflected fund interest through retirement savings plans, an expected fall in sales after the end of the 1977 tax year was substantially less than in previous years.

Douglas said that Canadians' interest in the 77 mutual funds operating in the country quickened, with a 13-per-cent increase in purchases of fund shares in the first half of 1978. At the same time there was a 14-per-cent drop in the amount of money redeemed from the funds.

Again, we have everything and We Undersell Everybody
Last month we launched a mild attack on Mr. Trudeau's government for its forced bilingual relabelling policy. This month we've knuckled under to Mr. Pierre by hiring a Quebecker to relabel all of our items in French. But we'll assume the man's payments as a loss in our rental accommodation rather than pass the labelling cost on to our customers. We will adhere to the wishes and laws of the Parliament of Canada, but we'll never panhandle (beg) to any politician.

Baghdad: a few Nightmares

By BERND DEBUSMANN

BAGHDAD (Reuter) — "In the city of one thousand and one nights, a few nightmares must be taken for granted," said a foreign resident here. "One of mine features blocked pipes."

Confronted with an uncomprehending stare, he explained:

"Yes, blocked pipes, overflowing basins, dripping taps . . . you try and get a plumber here and you'll know what I mean."

A familiar tale in Western suburbia, no doubt. But in Baghdad, the problem is slightly different. There is no particular shortage of plumbers — only of plumbers and repairmen willing to enter a foreigner's house.

Ten years after Iraq's leftist rulers came to power in a bloodless coup, their xenophobia is topic No. 1 among the foreign community of Baghdad. Diplomats, technical experts and businessmen from East and West complain about the ever-present secret police and its inhibiting effect on contacts between Iraqis and foreigners.

Since February, no Iraqi can work for a foreign embassy or international organization without a special permit from the foreign office. It failed to issue permits to at least two citizens already employed by an embassy because they expressed reluctance to supply the security service with details on their work.

"The few Iraqis who dare visit me at home park their cars a few blocks away and walk," said a European businessman. "There is a round-the-clock police detail on the corner of my road. The cops take down the licence number of every car that parks in front of my house."

The same happens, one is told, during diplomatic receptions. A police car and a jeep roll up, out come note books and licence numbers are taken down.

But the supervision has a few holes. "You would think that every self-respecting police state would bug the phone of a political officer," said a man who works at a Western embassy. "Do I have a phone? I applied for one eight months ago. . . ."

Iraqis say fiercely hot summers and cold winters are largely responsible for one of the world's most violent political tempers. It makes the country's 11.5 million people difficult to govern and is, or so they say, part of the reason for the leadership's almost obsessive preoccupation with internal security.

The summer sun begins scorching Baghdad by 8 a.m., and sweating Baghdadis elbow for the shade of awnings and building ledges. By one o'clock streets are nearly deserted in temperatures about 110 degrees F.

The city comes to life after nightfall. People pour into the streets, go shopping, pack sidewalk cafes — all-male preserves — and sip beer in one of the scores of beer halls.

Baghdad is one of the few Arab capitals where the regular visitor has the impression of steady material progress. A series of reform measures has given the Iraqi man-in-the-street a more equitable share in his country's wealth — based on enormous oil reserves — than in most other Middle East states.

The government guarantees jobs for everyone, rents are subsidized, services cheap, medical care and education free.

Nightlife in Haroun al-Rashid's glorious city is not in keeping with the One Thousand and One Nights image. "If you want good oriental belly-dancing," a Baghdadi said, "this is the wrong place to go. You'll find better performers in Cairo or Beirut."

MEMORIES OF NAZI BREEDING

STEINHOERING, West Germany (AP) — The birth of a "test-tube" baby in Britain has stirred memories here of Nazi experiments with human breeding before and during the Second World War.

About 2,800 children born at a Nazi maternity home in this Bavarian village in that time were the offspring of Adolf Hitler's experiments, which did not involve laboratory conception as in Britain but rather a strict and sometimes forced selection of prospective parents with the aim of expanding the Aryan (Caucasian) race.

Britain's test-tube baby, Louise Brown, was born of a married couple who could not have children because of a blockage of the wife's fallopian tubes. An egg was surgically removed from Mrs. Lesley Brown, fertilized in a laboratory with her husband's sperm and then implanted in the mother's womb. The girl was born July 25 in what was described as a breakthrough for women who cannot bear children because of fallopian blockage.

The offspring of the Nazis' selective breeding experiments were known as the "fuehrer's children" because they were born and reared within a specially chosen SS (elite guard) society called "Lebensborn," which means well-spring of life.

The progeny of "racially pure" SS officers and pedigreed women were destined to become the second generation of rulers of Hitler's empire. There have been no comprehensive studies on how they have fared since 1945.

While some were the children of SS officers and their wives, birth certificates show 90 per cent of those born in the clinic here were illegitimate, many of them products of liaisons in an SS bordello 32 kilometres to the west in Munich.

SS chief Heinrich Himmler established Lebensborn to propagate the Germanic race and encourage SS members to increase their families. He was distressed by Germany's low birth rate because, with a war looming, Nazi German expansion depended on a large population to conquer territory and colonize it.

Himmler wanted to breed the SS into a biological elite. He believed that not only physical attributes but also character traits such as loyalty and courage could be biologically transmitted.

Most of the mothers were Germans. Other women with appropriate features and ancestry were recruited from Nazi-occupied Western Europe, Scandinavia and the Balkans. Fifteen maternity homes were scattered over Nazi-occupied Europe, including France, Norway, Poland and Austria.

"The women were sent to the Lebensborn clinic here three months after becoming pregnant and they got the best possible medical care," Steinhoering's mayor, Karl Stabernak, 53, said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"After giving birth, they stayed on for three months and then went away. Only a few took their babies with them after the war. Most were afraid to go back home with a Lebensborn baby."

Most Lebensborn children were raised by SS foster families.

More than 200 abandoned children, ranging from infants to four-year-olds, and a few mothers and pregnant women were found in the home by U.S. troops who arrived in May 6, 1945. Most of the mothers and officials had fled.

"The U.S. Army took care of these babies and many were later adopted by Americans," Stabernak said.

Lebensborn officials testified at the Nuernberg war crimes trials that altogether 12,000 children were born at the clinics, half of them illegitimate.

Nfld. Whales May Be in Trouble

HOLYROOD, Nfld. (CP) — The white underside of the whale's five-metre starboard fin flashed in the sun as she rolled and whistled to her calf.

The humpback appeared to be feeding on squid, unaware of speculation ashore that she and others of her kind might soon become the targets for explosive harpoons.

The speculation, rampant in Newfoundland all summer and the subject of reaction from at least one protest group, ignored the views of the International Whaling Commission (IWC) of which Canada is a member.

The IWC now allows only nine humpbacks to be killed annually by native people in Greenland.

Mac Mercer of Ottawa, Canada's representative on the IWC, says the commission would like to save those nine.

The killing of humpbacks in Canadian waters was forbidden in 1960 when the animal was declared an endangered species. In 1972 Canada banned all forms of whaling in its waters, except in the case of some whales hunted as food by Inuit in the Arctic.

Patrick Moore of Vancouver, president of the Greenpeace Foundation, says there are an "incredible" number of reports of too many whales in Newfoundland waters.

Moore, in Newfoundland for a seal hunt court case, said in an interview Greenpeace would oppose any resumption of whaling in Canada.

"If they try that someone will get killed," Moore said. "We'll be out there between the whales and the first harpoon fired."

Greenpeace, which opposes the annual seal hunt, has attempted to halt whaling by the Soviet Union in the Pacific and by Icelanders in the North Atlantic.

Since 1972, Newfoundland fishermen have been complaining that whales have destroyed nets and other gear. The complaints, mostly about humpbacks, were more vocal this fall as open-line radio shows brought up the subject for listeners in coastal areas.

Mercer said in interviews carried by the CBC's daily Fishermans Broadcast that it is obvious more of the northwest Atlantic's 1,200 to 1,500 humpback whales are showing up in Newfoundland waters this year.

He said this does not mean that the population had increased, merely a change in feeding habits.

The animals, which range from the Caribbean to Greenland, spend much of the summer and fall in Newfoundland coastal waters to feed on squid and caplin.

Caplin, a smelt-like fish about eight inches long, roll onto Newfoundland beaches in early summer to spawn. Squid appear later and during the last couple of years have been plentiful.

The 15-metre humpbacks, recognizable by their arm-like side fins, 70-ton fin whales and smaller sei and minke whales provide a thrilling sight each summer for pleasure boats and visitors in Newfoundland waters.

Killer whales and giant blues also are occasionally seen. Most common are in the six-metre potheads, or pilot whales.

On one August day offshore from Holyrood, 35 kilometres west of St. John's, several pods of potheads, individual humpbacks and others were frolicking near the surface of the sunlit, calm waters of Conception Bay.

Squid were visible in the water and some whales obviously were feeding.

One family jigging for cod from a becalmed sailboat hauled their lines aboard to avoid several humpbacks, including youngsters, which breached nearby. The animals spouted, rolled close to the boat and dove.

Hal Whitehead, one of two graduate students using a small sailing craft and a federal grant to study whales this summer, says humpbacks can get entangled in nets and other fishing gear during a feeding frenzy.

Whitehead, a Briton who was operating with his partner out of Bay de Verde at the northern side of the mouth of Conception Bay, agreed with Mercer that feeding habits appeared to be changing.

He said it was possible more humpbacks were coming close to land because of heavier fishing for caplin by trawlers offshore.

Humpbacks and other whales would not deliberately attack small boats or nets, Whitehead said.

He said that when pursuing a school of caplin or squid, it was possible that humpbacks might blunder into nearly-invisible gillnets used by fishermen. But when concentrating on their surroundings, whales would never allow themselves to physically touch any object, especially a man-made one.

VOILA! IT'S LE WILD WEST IN SMALL QUEBEC TOWN

ST. TITE-DES-CAPS, Que. (CP) — Jesse James, Billy the Kid and other gunslingers from the Old West hold a cherished place in the childhood memories of many people, even in rural Quebec.

But few travellers who wander unknowingly into this town 60 kilometres northeast of Quebec City expect to come face to face with cowboys, sheriffs and outlaws.

Yet there it is, smack in the middle of Charlevoix county: A whole town that looks like a set from a Hollywood Western, a town that will attract 100,000 visitors this year because kids from five to 75 love a shoot-out.

"People really appreciate this type of entertainment," said Jean-Noel Fortin, president of 1873 Territory, the Indispensible Entertainment Organization of Kebek, Inc., which operates the project.

"At first, we aimed mostly at children, but there are many more adults who come here," Fortin said. In 1977, the company's first year of operation, more than 47,000 of the 60,000 visitors were adults.

The project was conceived five years ago by area resident Serge Cournoyer. Others became interested and soon they were working on the financing for the village.

Neither the federal and provincial governments were ready to help, so the money was raised from private sources.

The 1873 Territory covers a million square feet, and it's open this year from mid-May to mid-October.

Visitors can watch a mini rodeo or have a cold one in the old saloon, one of 50 "period" establishments on a street that includes a general store, a blacksmith, a pony express station and an undertaker.

Farm animals wander around, there's a pony merry-go-round for the kids and the older folk can go horseback riding. Visitors have to take a stagecoach just to get into town.

Every half hour, the townspeople stage a show that begins with a bank robbery and ends with the hanging of one of the bad guys. Another bites the dust in a spectacular gunfight.

The 1873 Territory is not just a tourist attraction; It provides 60 jobs in an area with a high rate of unemployment.

Fortin said the company hopes to expand shortly by investing $200,000 in a typical 19th century Canadian village.

Meanwhile, Fortin is wondering whether Quebec's Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin will notice that most of the signs in 1873 Territory are in English to accommodate English-speaking visitors. That's contrary to Quebec's French language charter which requires commercial signs to be in French.

China Curbs Its Welcome

PEKING (Reuter) — Those full-scale airport welcomes for important foreign visitors followed by extravagant banquets in the Great Hall of the People are about to become a thing of the past.

For the past 29 years important foreigners, from the leader of a tiny island group to the head of the world's mightiest powers, could expect to be feted and flattered, but the practice is about to end.

From Oct. 1, no more banquets attended by hundreds of guests will be held and the diplomatic corps will no longer have to line up along the tarmac at Peking Airport in sweltering sun or bone-chilling winds to shake hands with visitors.

Chinese officials say the country will "conform with international practice" and cut back its welcomes. A note sent to foreign missions by the protocol department of the ministry of foreign affairs says the system will be reformed from Oct. 1, the 29th anniversary of Communist rule.

"Heads of diplomatic missions in China will no longer be informed of the visit to China of heads of state or government of foreign countries by the protocol department of the foreign ministry or be asked to meet them or see them off," the note said.

"In the light of circumstances, a meeting of heads of diplomatic missions with a visiting head of state or government may be arranged by the Chinese side. Only the head of the diplomatic mission of the country of the visitor will be invited to the banquet given by the Chinese side in is honor."

The brief announcement was welcomed by diplomats who have seen their waistlines swell from the seven-or eight-course dinners served in the Great Hall and sat through long speeches—the record is said to be 95 minutes set by an African leader.

MEDICAL MIXUP GROUNDS PILOT

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A U.S. National Guard pilot who has survived dozens of dangerous rescue missions in the treacherous White Mountains may never fly again because an unexplained medieal mixup during a routine checkup has left him blind.

"I thought my flying days would end when a mountain tip or a pine tree crashed through my cockpit, not because of a mixup in eyedrops," Lt.-Col. Russell Tilton said Thursday.

But on Sept. 9, Tilton was grounded after a routine annual flight physical, not because of his health, but because of the examination itself, guard officials said.

A senior flight surgeon had completed most of the examination and was running a routine test for glaucoma, an eye disease.

Seconds after administering eyedrops that should have dilated his pupils, Tilton's eyes began to burn. "It felt like someone had shoved hot pokers into my eyes," he said.

Guard officials said the medication the doctor administered was in a bottle labelled as the required ophthalmic solution, but in reality contained Hemocult, a highly caustic mixture used to test stool samples.

Although he entered the examination with 20-20 vision and left almost blind, Tilton said he does not blame the doctor. "There was really no way the docoor could have known," Tilton said. "I've got the pain but he's got the memories.

"I went to the specialists and took all the medications they offered and although they said it would correct itself any minute, that minute never came," Tilton said.

Bird dogs of air tally up amazing loss score

Travel Tips

By STAN DELAPLANE

Between New York and Dublin — a non-stop flight — I lost a typewriter. Flying from Paris to London, one hour, I said to my young daughter: "Stop playing with that new wrist watch. You'll lose it."

I put it in my pocket for safe—keeping. And I lost it.

You could follow my trail around Europe by ties I left hanging on door knobs. And I've left enough pajamas under foreign hotel pillows (tucked away by the maid) to sleep an army.

IT'S NOT THAT I'm a born loser. If you move around a lot, packing and unpacking, you're going to shed a few things. Ties, pajamas and toothbrushes seem to be my losing streak.

I've got some kind of block on typewriters too. I never let anybody else carry them. Then I leave them in London airport. Find out when I start to write in Bergen, Norway.

I've made some notable recoveries. Airlines will bird dog all over for you. Since they're linked by Telex, their score is amazing.

SAS SNIFFED out the typewriter at London. Flew it to Bergen the same day and I never missed an edition.

Air France located my daughter's wristwatch. Sent it around to my hotel in Paris.

Pan American picked up a typewriter I left (along with my heart) in San Francisco. Had it waiting for me at Kauai before I got there, having stayed over for lunch at Waikiki.

Leaving New Orleans one morning, I put my pocket alarm on the airport cafe table. Walked away without it. In San Francisco, National Air got on the Telex. Had my watch on the next flight. And I picked it up before 6 that night.

THESE ARE things airlines will do for you. (Though I'm not advising losing things just to test them.)

On a snowy weekend in New York we flew with two small children to London. The last flight off — snow closed in just as we got in the air.

Hurry up loading had put our baggage on the next flight. So we got into London with no pajamas or toothbrushes. No diapers. No whiskey-soda. Believe me, nothing is open in London from Saturday noon to Monday.

BUT - SOMEHOW TWA outfitted us with everything before bedtime.

If you are to keep your luggage — (and your wits) — put a business card inside each bag. The name tag on the outside can be torn off in handling.

(I have an outside tag on my typewriters. An inside business card. And my name and address on the typewriter frame. The way I misplace them, I'm glad I don't play a grand piano for a living.)

I carry a flight bag with pajamas, toothbrush, razor and something to read. Carry it on by hand. Just in case.

"We are renting a condominium at Puerto Vallarta over Christmas. I wonder if we should take health precautions."

THE CONDOMINIUM people will see that you get purified water in five-gallon bottles. (Be sure to use it for brushing your teeth, too.)

The local Americans — probably the condominium people too — will tell you the name of the mild purifying solution you buy in drugstores. Everybody washes their salad vegetables in it.

U.S. Public Health thinks well enough of Mexico's record that they no longer make you show a smallpox vaccination card.

I never heard of malaria in P.V. None of the local Americans take anti-malaria pills.

SOME DOCTORS advise preventative shots against hepatitis. Others aren't sure they do any good. And all of them say they only last six weeks anyway.

"I need a new passport but somehow I've misplaced my birth certificate."

Your old passport is all you need for the new one. If you're going to Europe, the best-looking passport cases are sold by Loewe of Madrid. They have branches in other European cities.

Off-season rates enticing

Off-season rates and ever-lowering budget fares are enticing more North Americans to vacation from September through early December instead of the traditional summer months and holiday periods.

Europe, the Far East, the Caribbean, Hawaii, Florida — you name it and chances are your travel agent has a terrific package deal for you in this time period.

In the excitement of preparing for such an off-season vacation, possibly for the first time, don't overlook these preparation "musts":

● If you're going abroad, check out your passport needs and immunization requirements well in advance.

● Pack any special medications you may need and ask your doctor to recommend aids for queasy stomach and diarrhea — common ailments of tourists in foreign countries.

● Carry along a small sewing kit for clothing repairs, a travel iron to spruce up your apparel as needed and a compact first aid kit for minor cuts and scrapes that are inevitable.

● If you're heading for a hot climate, remember to pack your sunscreen . . . and use it liberally and daily. Nothing spoils an otherwise great vacation than a severe case of sunburn. Touring or sun bathing, overexposure to ultraviolet rays can damage your skin. Your best bet is one of the newer PABA-based formulations like Sundown that is perspiration and water-resistant. You may not find it where you're going, so be sure to pack it.

● Hairblowers, electric shavers and other small electrical items you plan to bring along may require special adapters in different countries. Check this out in advance and purchase the necessary adapters.

● If you wear glasses, make certain you have an emergency pair with you. Likewise, extra sunglasses, particularly if they are prescription lenses. If you wear contact lenses, especially the soft variety, you'll need your sterilization equipment and distilled water. Depending on how long you'll be away, it may by be wise to pack a pair of glasses too, for emergencies.

● Leave a copy of your day-to-day itinerary with a relative or friend, so you can be reached if necessary. This applies, of course, if you'll be touring rather than staying put in one vacation spot.

● Don't overpack clothing. Aside from possible excess baggage penalties, invariably you won't need everything you're planning to take. Do plan to bring something suitable should the weather go to either extreme — too hot or too cold. Light, plastic rainwear and/or folding travel umbrellas may come in handy, even if you don't like to consider rain spoiling your vacation.

● Ask you travel agent for currency guide, sun protection leaflet and other travel aids he may have available to make your trip easier and safer. If your agent is out of these aids, he can tell you where to obtain them.

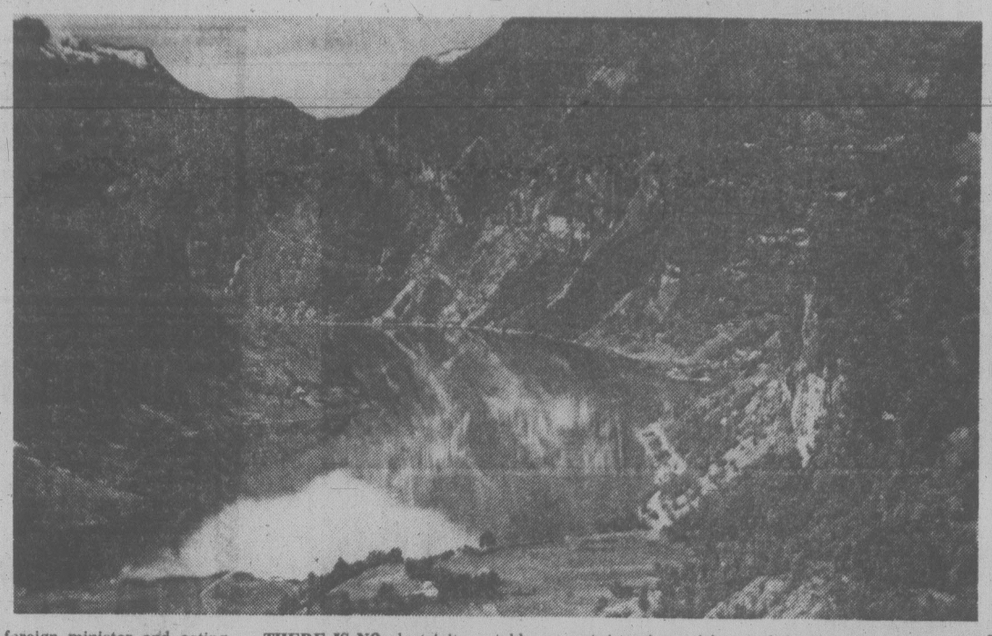
Norwegian hut refreshes spirit

By R. W. APPLE Jr.

STRANDA, Norway — Since the turn of the century, foreigners have flocked to the fjord country of western Norway.

Kaiser Wilhelm was the area's most famous visitor. He liked it so much that he came here almost every summer, and when the little city of Alesund burned down in 1906, he sent German architects to rebuild it in the "jugendstil" (art nouveau style) that was then fashionable.



GEIRANGER Fjord, a ribbon of cobalt blue, winds between 4,000-foot cliffs, 112 kilometres from open sea. This summer no fewer than 78 ocean liners dropped anchor at the foot of the fjord but almost none of the visitors found their way to the Norwegian huts which are tucked away on the borders of this fjord as well as along other fjords, in the forests and along the North Sea.

THIS SUMMER, no fewer than 78 ocean liners will have dropped anchor at the foot of the magnificent Geiranger Fjord, a ribbon of cobalt blue winding between 4,000-foot cliffs, 112 kilometres from the open sea.

But almost none of the visitors find their way to a Norwegian hut. A pity, because the hut is the quintessential national institution. Like the sauna in Finland, the hut in Norway is believed to have almost unlimited powers to refresh and restore body and spirit, to help a man put things in their proper perspective.

"TWO HOURS in my hut at dawn," said an Oslo businessman, whose hut is located near the mouth of the Oslo Fjord, "is enough to wipe away the tensions and the anxieties of a week in my office."

The hut — "hytte" in Norwegian — is where the Norwegian city dweller resumes his passionate love affair with nature. Cities are somehow inimical to the national character of a country where mountains, forests, glaciers, islands, rivers and lakes occupy no less than 96.5 per cent of the area. The fishing village and the isolated farm, not the city, are the Norwegian's natural habitat, and the hut is the urban Norwegian's way of getting back to reality.

ACCORDING to Tor Trosterog of the Norwegian Hut Association, there are 280,000 huts in Norway, one for every 15 people, and 10,000 new ones are built each year. Trosterog calculates that about 1.3 million Norwegians will visit a hut at least once in 1978.

There is plenty of space for hut-building in this underpopulated country, which has more than twice the area but only a tenth of the population of England. If the land were divided equally among all citizens of Norway, each would be entitled to 25 acres.

THERE ARE mountain huts and lakeside huts, huts in the forests along the Swedish border and huts along the North Sea.

Prime Minister Odvar Nordli walks 8.4 kilometres to reach his hut in the woods, and he goes there every July. Most of the cabinet disappears from Oslo at the same time. One day in July, the energy minister, Bjartmar Gjerde, found himself the acting prime minister, acting foreign minister and acting defence minister.

THE THREE—ROOM hut that belongs to Per Vassbotn, a 36-year-old Norwegian journalist, is a typical example, except that its site is more spectacular than most. It is perched on a mountainside at the head of the awe-inspiring 13-mile-long Stranda Valley — a glacier-ringed wonderland that reminds many North Americans of Yosemite.

"Here you find yourself," said Vassbotn, who lives in Oslo. "You think of the good you've done and the bad. You sleep, eat, walk, maybe read some Ibsen."

VASSBOTN WAS born in Stranda, only a kilometre or so from the hut. It is spectacular country, cut by fjords like the Geiranger and valleys like the Stranda. The people are stern and pious, and there is only one liquor store in the entire county. Vassbotn is not a religious man, and he has the conviviality of his trade, but he feels the need to return to Stranda, and he comes back here for three weeks every summer.

HE PAYS 30 kroner a year (about $5.50) to the owner of the land on which the hut stands. It is a rocky plot, unfit for farming, but in summertime there is a carpet of buttercups, heather and bluebells beneath the pines and birches. The hut shares the land with a herd of sheep and their tinkling bells.

Vassbotn and his father built the hut 15 years ago. They bought the old village bookstore, which had begun life as a German barracks at Andalsnes, and disassembled it. A horse and sleigh pulled the pieces up the mountainside, and the two Vassbotns put them together to make a one-story building, about 24 feet long and 15 feet wide, with a huge window overlooking the valley.

THERE IS NO electricity, no running water no telephone, no central heating. But there is a spring outside, discovered by Vassbotn's mother with a divining rod. There are oil lamps for light and there is an open fireplace to take the chill off the evenings.

One tiny bedroom accommodates Vassbotn and his wife, Anne Beate, and another is shared by their sons, Oystein, 11, and Hallvard, 8. The rest of the hut is one big room, furnished with comfortable modern furniture, with a tiny kitchen tucked into a corner.

"YOU JUST open your senses to nature," Bassbotn told a recent American visitor, the first foreigner he had ever taken to the hut.

It was after 11 p.m., but it was still light enough to see the glint of the glaciers down the valley.

"A big car is not real luxury," he said "Time, a view, fresh air — those are the real luxuries, the things that I crave. My grandfather never even saw a car, and he was a happy man."

VASSBOTN has firm ideas about huts. They must not be bigger than 50 square meters (about 450 square feet). They must not have television sets. And there must be a "pies," or fireplace, besides which hours may be spent, staring into the flames and thinking.

"A hut without a pies," he said, "is no hut at all."

What a cruise! You'll fly via Wardair to Spain to board Intervac's cruise ship Jupiter. The ship sets sail for Morocco where you'll visit 2 ports — bustling Casablanca of movie fame and Agadir said to have guaranteed sun 300 days a year. You'll stop at 2 ports in the Canary Islands — Lanzarote, an island that provokes a feeling of mystery and Las Palmas with its magnificent sandy beaches. Next you'll spend a truly relaxing week at sea crossing the Atlantic to Trinidad, the vibrant island where calypso, steel bands and limbo were born. Then onto serene Tobago, subtle and secluded, the perfect complement to Trinidad. And finally Barbados with its interesting mix of African traditions and British ways. And in between visits to these exciting ports... you'll enjoy shipboard life... superb dining, deck activities, movies, dancing, entertainment by Mary Lou Collins, drinks at low shipboard prices and much more. Come, join in the fun of this unique "Three Seas" cruise.

November 13 to November 29.

*Price shown is from Vancouver, per person based on double occupancy, and varies depending on cabin category selected. Includes return Charter Class airfare to Toronto, which must be booked at least 30 days in advance, meals, accommodation and more.

Top: Here at South Africa's Cape Point, Atlantic and Indian oceans meet. Below: Harbor at Hout Bay, headquarters of crayfishing fleet.

CAPE TOWN — The Cape Peninsula Drive, often described as surpassing the renowned Grande Corniche along the Cote d'Azur, is one of the most popular attractions in South Africa with tourists.

If you intend to holiday in or near Cape Town, you should do yourself a favor by driving along this great marine highway which hovers between rugged mountains and the sea and offers a succession of magnificent views.

The entire route is only about 140 kilometres long, but because of the frequent stops most visitors make to admire the views and take photographs, a full day should be allowed for it.

The usual routing is to drive from Cape Town along De Wall Drive, from which there is a splendid view over the city and Table Bay, passing the University of Cape Town perched on the slopes of Table Mountain. As the road turns towards the suburbs of Claremont and Wynberg, branch off into Rhodes Drive which takes you past the renowned Kirstenbosch Botanical Gardens, the centre for the scientific study and cultivation of the indigenous flora of South Africa, which total 4½ times the number to be found in Canada.

The next stop is Muizenberg, a splendid surfing beach which in summer is a gay colorful scene with its bathers and umbrellas. Next comes Simonstown with its winding streets and quaint pubs, which help to give this naval base town the flavor of an Old English seaport.

On the way to the southwesternmost tip of the African continent, Cape Point, take time to visit the Cape of Good Hope Nature Reserve, a sanctuary of wilderness with an array of wild flowers, birds and animals.

The route back takes you past the little village and wide beach of Kommetjie and soon you are on the famous Chapmans Peak Drive. This is rated one of the world's best marine drives, its winding road granting a delightful panorama of white beaches and blue sea before descending into the charming fishing harbor of Hout Bay, headquarters of the crayfishing fleet.

Puerto Rico blends rich history with spectacular view

By MARGARET NESS

SAN JUAN — A visitor to Puerto Rico can combine a trip back into history with mountain scenery and some fine oceanside resorts — and the temperature varies little throughout the year.

To savor this Spanish-populated island, one should spend at least a couple of days in the Old San Juan district with its formidable forts and narrow streets lined with old houses and shops.

Then rent a car and spend a few days at one of the resorts outside San Juan, including a drive along the south coast to Ponce, the second-largest city.

THE MOST important sight in Old San Juan is El Morro, the 16th-century fortress jutting out at one end of the island like a ship's prow. It rises 140 feet straight up from the ocean and is on six levels. It was such a formidable protection even Sir Francis Drake was unable to capture it.

HISTORICALLY important is Casa Blanca, intended as the home of Ponce de Leon, one-time governor and seeker after the Fountain of Youth. He died before it was completed, but his descendants lived in it for some 250 years.

The resort includes a modern hotel with Moorish overtones, a beach village of cottages and two areas devoted to golf and tennis with their own accommodations.

A DELIGHTFUL feature is a pre-breakfast snack at dawn to see the sun rise out of the sea. The rolls are made by hotel bakers.

Ponce can be a day's sightseeing tour from Las Palmas or a quick tour en route to another resort. Photograph the outlandish red-painted firehall on the main square.

Then spend time in the small gallery, containing an exceptional collection of English and European paintings as well as some interesting local works.

STAY A DAY or so farther along the coast at the fishing village of Parguera or nearby to take a night boat ride to Phosphorescent Bay. A moonless night is best to see the silvery ripples on the water.

Return to San Juan either by continuing along the coast route or by way of San German to Ponce and thence along panoramic secondary roads through Juana Diaz, Coamo and Albonito to San Juan.

SAN GERMAN is one of the oldest towns on the island. The pale yellow cathedral with its wooden, nail-studded doors was started in 1773 and only finished in 1855.

THE 17th century Porta Caeli church in San German, is believed to be oldest Christian church in New World. However, due to its deteriorating condition, it is closed to public.

Love Boat heads south

VANCOUVER — P&O/Princess Cruises is offering a mini-cruise vacation to California this fall called the Love Boat Sampler.

The sea-land-air package departs from Vancouver October 2, and comes in two plans. Plan "A" is a five-day cruise-tour to Seattle and San Francisco with overnight accommodations at a first-class hotel and flight back to Vancouve October 6. Plan "B" is a six-day affair to Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles, with similar top overnight accommodations, and flight back to Vancouver October 7.

Personal and luggage transfers between airport-hotel and ship are included, and prices are from $390.95 per person (double occupancy) on plan "A" and from $540.55 per person (double occupancy) on plan "B".

For reservations and information have a travel agent contact Princess Tours, 727 Washington Bldg., Seattle, Washington 98101. Telephone (206) 223-7272.

STRIKE OVER, CHARGES LOOM

STE. THERESE, Que. (CP) — Striking employees at the Canadian Kenworth Co. Ltd. truck assembly plant here voted Friday night to return to work, bringing an end to an eight-month-old strike pocked by violence.

Workers voted 273-56 to return to work, the union said, despite the fact that several strikers may face charges in connection with a violent demonstration at the plant, 30 kilometres north of Montreal.

14,144 Acres Held in Land Banks

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — There are 14,144 acres of raw urban land across Canada being held in federal-provincial land banks, federal officials said Friday.

The federal government wants to terminate the land assembly program as part of its cost-cutting exercise.

The banks range from a paltry 62 acres total in Prince Edward Island to 6,966 acres in Ontario. They exist in all provinces except Quebec and Alberta.

Next to Ontario, Nova Scotia with 2,429 acres has the largest amount of land set aside under the federal-provincial agreements. Manitoba has 321 acres and British Columbia has 812 acres.

Between 1971 and 1977 federal-provincial land assembly programs spent $116.9 million acquiring land and another $303 million for development.

The 14,144 urban acres are jointly owned by the participating provinces and the federal government, and are managed by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the provinces in a partnership arrangement.

Sale of raw or serviced land has to be done by mutual agreements between the two governments.

Ending the program will require the agreement of the provinces, a CMHC official said. Savings will amount to an estimated $8.3 million in the 1978-79 and 1979-80 fiscal years.

Dredging Tip Denied

TORONTO (CP) — A former dredging executive denied Friday that he was tipped off that police were investigating bid rigging in the dredging industry while being questioned by the RCMP.

Louis Rochette, former vice-president of Marine Industries Ltd. of Sorel, Que., testified he did not know police were investigating bid rigging when RCMP questioned him about an alleged attempt to pay $50,000 in return for an inflated bid on a ship salvaging job.

The tender was for the salvaging of the 7,000-ton barge Irving Whale, which sank off the coast of Prince Edward Island in 1970.

Rochette, 10 other men and nine dredging companies, including Marine Industries, are charged with conspiring to defraud public agencies of more than $4.27 million by rigging dredging bids.

In testimony earlier this week, Rochette said he was asked in 1973 by Robert Schneider of Canadian Dredge and Dock Co. Ltd. of Toronto to honor a $50,000 debt Schneider said was owed because Canadian Dredge had placed an inflated bid on a dredging contract.

New Pay Guide for Men, Women

OTTAWA (CP) — Equal pay guides drawn up by the federal human rights commission permit employers to justify different wages for males and females on grounds ranging from seniority and merit to demotion and training.

But the general rule-of-thumb is that equal wages must be paid to men and women in the same establishment in jobs requiring the same skill, effort and responsibilities under similar working conditions.

The guides were approved this week. Rita Cadieux, deputy human rights commissioner, said Friday they will be officially issued next week to inform employers how to interpret new equal pay provisions in the Human Rights Act.

The law is aimed at eliminating wage discrimination against women in federal government departments and agencies, Crown corporations, and the federally-regulated private sector ranging from chartered banks to small inter-provincial trucking companies.

The guides describe what is meant by skill, effort, responsibility and conditions of work to determine if employees are "performing work of equal value."

They describe grounds employers can use to justify different wages for different sexes:

—Merit pay for performance measured under a formal system which employees know about;

—Seniority pay to reward length of service;

—Red circling where the position of an employee is downgraded as a result of re-evaluation and the wage is frozen or curtailed;

—Rehabilitation where higher wages than warranted are paid while a worker recovers from a temporary injury or illness;

—Demotion pay because of unsatisfactory job performance or an internal labor force surplus. This covers one-time or gradual wage reductions or freezing wages;

—Temporary training positions which result in a worker getting different wages than a person who has a similar position on a permanent basis.

The guides are legally binding on a human rights tribunal which can be called on to settle complaints about wage discrimination in cases where conciliation does not work.

The tribunal can order employers to pay wage increases when discrimination is found. But the commission will not accept complaints unless all other avenues are first exhausted.

The guides are the partial outcome of months of talks between the commissioners, employers, trade unions, staff associations, women's groups and labor relations experts.

"We knew in advance it would be difficult to satisfy everybody," Ms. Cadieux said. "We have not tried to satisfy one side or the other."

Complaints of sexual wage discrimination which turn out to be the result of regional economic differences will be rejected, Ms. Caidieux said.

"The act is not there to correct market differences. It is meant to correct a wrong — when women are not paid the same rate as men doing work of equal value."

The guides leave open the question of which groups of workers can be compared, saying only they must work in the same "establishment."

ABC Rules Eased

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian airlines with advance booking charters now will be allowed to fly Canadian passengers abroad and return them to Canada with foreign visitors, the Canadian transport commission announced Friday.

The change is effective immediately.

In another change the commission said it will allow combinations of advance booking charter flights. This will allow carriers to combine such flights on operations having no more than two points of origin on the same day.

★ LIMITS INCREASED

MONTREAL (CP) — An International Civil Aviation Organization conference on air law wound up here Friday with a decision to increase the limits of air carriers' liability to third parties on the ground in air crashes.

Third-party liability for a large aircraft such as a Boeing 747 is to be set at a maximum total of $23 million (U.S.) while $150,000 liability is to be set as a maximum for individuals hurt or killed.

Stay on Job, Teachers Told

EDMONTON (CP) — The city's public school teacher's lost another round Friday in their bid to maintain strike action in support of their demands in contract negotiations.

Alberta Supreme Court Justice W.J C. Kirby ordered the 3,900 teachers to stay on the jobs. The provincial cabinet had passed an order sending them back work Thursday.

Teachers may have lost the momentum of this strike by the back-to-work order, but they are still free to continue legal action against the cabinet and to press on with their contract negotiations.

An arbitrator is to be appointed to make a binding decision in the dispute between the two sides.

Medicare Cut To Indians?

EDMONTON (CP) — The federal government will no longer pay the medicare premiums of all Indians, the Indian Association of Alberta says.

Joe Dion, association president, said the association has received a confidential copy of a policy directive issued by the medical services program of the health and welfare department which indicates that position.

The directive instructs medical services personnel to implement a policy established in 1974, but never fully enforced, that medicare premiums and a range of other services should only be paid for "socially indigent" Indians and Inuit, Dion said.

Misuse Results In Charges

CALGARY (CP) — A total of 13 bribery and fraud charges have been laid by RCMP following a year-long investigation into the misuse of Stoney Indian band funds, a spokesman for the Alberta attorney-general's department said Friday.

The spokesman said five counts of giving secret commissions, five counts of receiving secret commissions and three counts of fraud have been laid.

The charges arise from a year-long investigation sparked by a two-day sit-in protest at the Morley reserve band office in September, 1976.

Backed by members of the American Indian Movement, 30 armed Indians stormed into the band office demanding an investigation into management of band funds.

Slack—King

Pastor E. Austin officiated at the double-ring ceremony in Glad Tidings Church on July 7, 1978, at 5 p.m., when Jo-Anne Dell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James King, exchanged vows with Warren Dale Slack, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Slack, all of Victoria.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a classic floor length gown of organza and embroidered lace, featuring a square neckline on a sleeveless, fitted bodice, sashed at waist. Her skirt was accented by a deep flounce around hem and train, tiny pearls centred embroidered silk flowers. A capulet of lace and pearls held a cathedral length veil of illusion tulle with appliques of silk organza flowers. The bride carried a cascading bouquet of red roses with rose tipped white streamers. Her Maid of Honour, Judy King, wore a yellow sun dress of floral sheer. The bridesmaids Gayle Scott, Colleen Mercer and Jacqueline Beckerly, wore matching sun dresses of green sheer, carrying nosegays of yellow and peach carnations with matching flowers in their hair. The bride's niece Corina Downer, a picture in a yellow sun dress and roses in her hair, scattered rose petals immediately in front of the bride. The groom, his best man, Ivan Slack and ringbearer Mark Slack, were handsome in powder blue tuxedos. Kevin and Dean King and Dean Gemmill ushered in the many guests.

The candle lighting ceremony was enhanced by a trumpet solo, "The Lord's Prayer," by Kevin King. The bride's sister Robyn Downer sang Dunlop's "Wedding Prayer during the signing of the Register. Following pictures at Government House, a lovely reception was held at the University Commons Building. Emcee George Foster, a close family friend, toasted the bride. There were many out of town guests including the bride's maternal grandmother Mrs. Eleanor Williams of Winnipeg, Man.

For a honeymoon in Disneyland, the bride donned a three-piece navy gabardine pant suit accented by a white blouse and accessories. The groom wore blue-grey slacks and a navy figured shirt. They now reside in Victoria.

Groleau—Dimock

St. Michael and All Angel's Church in Saanich, was the setting for a lovely wedding on September 2, 1978. Rev. W. J. Hill officiated at the double-ring ceremony, uniting Susan Mary Dimock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Dimock, and Wayne Lyle Groleau, son of Mrs. Lois Groleau and the late Mr. Herbert Groleau.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in her gown of Matte jersey. A floral spray of silk lace on English net fashioned the yoke of the fitted bodice. Narrow lace encircled the Empire waistline and floral appliques of lace accented the cuffs of the sleeves and the front of the skirt. A flowing cape swept en-train and a Quipure lace cap held her fingertip silk embroidered veil. To complete the picture, the bride carried a bouquet of tiny yellow roses and baby's breath. Maid of Honor, Linda Dolman, carried a bouquet of white daisies to complement her pretty floor-length gown. Best man was Ron Powell. Randy and Michael Dimock ushered the guests.

The reception was held at the Olde England Inn. Rev. W. J. Hill said grace, and Major Gordon Bissell proposed a toast to the bride. Out of town guests were Mrs. Lois Groleau and Mrs. May Faringer, mother and grandmother of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. W. Davidson and family; Mr. and Mrs. Powell; Mr. Ron Powell; Mr. Robert Folden, all from Saskatchewan. Miss Pat Bearman, Ontario; Mrs. G. Carlson, the Okanagan; Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Smith, Port Alice; and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lambert and daughter from White Rock.

SEA VIEW
EXECUTIVE HOME
FIRST OFFERING

Seldom does a property such as this become available and on viewing you will understand why. Situated on .08 acre of beautifully maintained lawn and terraced gardens, it has commanding views of the sea. The living room, dining room and den afford spectacular views, as do the sundecks.

There are three bedrooms on the main floor with two 4 pc. bathrooms and 2 pc. bathroom. The lower level has a 36' X 17' recreation room with fireplace and wet bar; a games room large enough for a full size billiard table; a fourth bedroom, 4 pc. bothroom and 2 pc. bathroom. In addition there is a full utility and laundry room and workshop.

The prroperty has both double carport and a separate garage. Greenhouse for the hobbyist and garden sprinkler syntem. Truly a quality home in an excellent section of Uplands offered at $259,500. Appointments to view with exclusive agents.

"Fairbridge"

A VILLAGE IN THE COUNTRY

An unbelievably peaceful and beautiful subdivision of 76 acres which includes 22 acres of fields and parkland for private enjoyment. This unique and one of a kind subdivision consists of 39 strata lots, no lot being less than ½ an acre. Now available are 6 single family 2 and 4 bedroom homes from $49,000 - $69,000. Also 20 lots ranging in price from $22,500 - $25,500. The subdivision is served by a paved private road, overhead street lighting with water and sewer services laid on to each lot. The private fields particularly would be of great interest to lovers of horses. The subdivision is surrounded by rich farmland and is located 2½ miles south of Duncan at 1741 Koksilah Rd. Driving time to Victoria is approx. 40 min. Simply to visit Fairbridge can be a deeply satisfying experience.

308 CARD OF THANKS

Nelson and Sean McDonald wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation to our relatives, friends and neighbors, during the illness and loss of our beloved wife and mother, Finola McDonald. Also for the Mass cards, sympathy cards, and many acts of kindness that we received.

Mrs. Archie Browne and family wishes to express their sincere appreciation for the many floral tributes, cards and donations. A great tribute to Archie's memory. A special thanks to Dr. Martin and Staff of Victoria General I.C.U., also kindness and comfort rendered by Padre D. Kendell and large attendance, and Cunningham Funeral Chapel.

We would like to express our sincere appreciation for the cards, floral tributes, help and concern shown to our family by so many friends and neighbors on the loss of our Brian — The Slade Family.

309 IN MEMORIAM

FRENCH — In loving memory of my dear husband Frank, who passed away September 23, 1972
The longest years of my life have past,
But the lovely memories will always last.
—Always remembered by his loving wife Jessie.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Drugged Meat Claim Rejected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Allegations that federal inspectors are not trying to find antibiotic residues in meat were rejected Friday by the head of the meat hygiene division of the federal agriculture department and a representative of the beef industry in British Columbia called for a public inquiry into the allegations because he is sure they are false.

Dr. M. G. Morissette, of the federal meat hygiene division, said in a telephone interview from Ottawa that his department conducts regular surveys for residues of pesticides, metals and antibiotics in the carcasses of cattle and swine.

He said the most recent antibiotics survey, conducted in co-operation with the federal health and welfare department, was carried out last year.

"Our results show that out of 5,000 animals tested the antibiotics residue was only 0.3 of one per cent in the muscle," said Morissette. "That level is so low that it's doubtful it would have any significance."

He said antibiotics surveys on cattle are carried out on a routine basis.

His comments were backed up by Dr. K. W. Perry, of the federal meat inspection division in B.C.

Perry said antibiotic residues in cattle "are not a problem as far as we are concerned." He also said that antibiotic residues are "covered as a routine part of inspection."

Henry Blazowski, secretary manager of the 2,500-member B.C. Cattlemen's Association, said in Kamloops that he would like to see an immediate public inquiry into the allegations that federal inspectors are not trying to find antibiotic residues in meat.

"If there was an inquiry I'm sure the allegations would be found to be totally false," said Blazowski.

He said B.C. probably has the best controls over injectable drugs of any province in Canada.

"Canada has initiated a very good meat inspection service and has been praised for it by many people," he said. "Many people from other countries come here to see our meat inspection service and how it works.

"It's ridiculous to allege that our federal inspectors are afraid to speak out. Our civil servants today have great job security."

Blazowski said he "questioned the motives" of the anonymous veterinarian who made the allegations.

"If he's afraid to put his name on the line there must be a reason but I don't know what it is," he said.

Foreign Student Limit Eyed - McGeer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Education Minister Pat McGeer has suggested that the provincial government may have to impose limits on the number of foreign students entering British Columbia to attend post-secondary institutions.

McGeer also predicted that high unemployment rates could press universities to adopt a Canada-first policy and hire Canadians rather than foreign students for teaching assistant positions.

Responding to a request from the B.C. Students' Federation for reaffirmation of his position on international education, McGeer said in a letter that he has opposed closing the door to teachers and students from foreign lands because he believes they add immeasurably to the quality of university life.

However, he said that the present economic climate in Canada and the poor employment prospects for graduate students will create pressure.

The best solution would be to find an appropriate balance which reflects a changing economy rather than to bar foreign students and academics altogether, McGeer said.

He said the ministry of labor has been meeting to deal with the question of students entering B.C. educational institutions on student visas, although as yet no firm policy has been reached.

John Doherty, provincial organizer for the students' federation, said Friday that the federal government has indicated that there would be no further restrictions on awarding teaching assistant positions to foreign students until 1981 or 1982.

Eric Vogt, vice-president in charge of faculty and student affairs at the University of B.C., said that he did not think foreign students at the university were taking jobs away from Canadians.

He said that it would be desirable to have more foreign students at the university.

Inquest for Man

Hospital officials say Galiano Giovanni (George) Piccoli of 923 Tolmie died shortly after he was taken to hospital by a neighbor, Curtis Larsen of 3254 Rutledge.

Circumstances of the death have not been released but a member of Piccoli's family said Piccoli had a history of heart trouble.

The inquest, conducted by coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the small debts courtroom at the Law Courts on Burdett.

Property Tax Bill Rapped

PENTICTON (CP) — The Union of British Columbia Municipalities criticized the provincial government Friday for shifting transit deficits onto property taxpayers with the Urban Transit Authority (UTA) Act.

In a late resolution overwhelmingly passed without debate at the close of the UBCM's annual convention, about 250 delegates called on the government to remove the property-tax provision.

Property taxes is one of three options open to municipalities to raise funds to cover annual operating deficits between 1979 and 1983. The others are a three-cent-a-gallon surtax for Vancouver- and Victoria-area municipalities or a surcharge on B.C. Hydro power bills.

Delegates said the property-tax provision is regressive. They predicted the other options would not adequately cover annual deficits.

Alderman Phil Ranger of Port Coquitlam, a Vancouver-area municipality of 25,000, who presented the late resolution, told delegates his city will have to pay $500,000 in 1979 and up to $1.25 million in transit costs by 1983 under the current formula. He said the city cannot afford such costs.

In an interview following the debate, Hugh Curtis, provincial minister of municipal affairs and housing, said the opposition is relatively mild and is based on a misunderstanding of the act.

"The delegates haven't done their homework," he said. He called Ranger's estimate "wildly inaccurate."

The UTA, formed after the act was passed last April, was established to plan and develop transit services throughout B.C. The authority, composed of municipal politicians, also is to work on a cost-sharing formula with the provincial government, to be completed by April 1, 1979.

Under the scheme, the total annual operating deficit would be shared 75 per cent by the provincial government and 25 per cent by municipalities in 1979, changing to a 60-40 share respectively by 1983.

The late resolution said that the property taxpayer is already under considerable pressure to raise money for schools and social services without being burdened with an additional tax on land for transit services.

Earlier, delegates decided to substitute a long-standing demand that the B.C. government remove school taxes from property with an "entirely new system of financing education costs."

About 250 delegates, all that remained by the end of the four-day convention attended by about 1,000 delegates, agreed to reconsider their standing policy that the provincial government assume all education costs.

The UBCM executive had proposed that the resolution be withdrawn in favor of the standing policy.

Vancouver Ald. May Brown told delegates the standing policy failed to take into account that if the provincial government paid all school costs, boards would lose control over local budgets.

During the convention, delegates approved resolutions calling for a return of the two-thirds majority approval on land zoning, reduced to a simple majority by the provincial government this year; reinstatement of the election of regional district directors and that the federal government not change laws prohibiting the use of marijuana.

THE SWISS LADDER TO THE TOP

International Swiss System tournaments are becoming more popular in the world of chess. For one thing, they give lesser known masters a chance to play and advance their ratings, something almost impossible in international round robins.

America has many masters capable of earning International Master titles who have had little opportunity to show what they can do. For example, in an open tournament in New York this year an unknown, Bruce Rind of Philadelphia, scored 7½ to tie for the third place and earn his first International Master norm.

AJEEB

Ajeeb was the name of a chess automaton built by Charles Arthur Hopper and exhibited at the Royal Polytechnical Institute in 1868, and later at the Crystal Palace and at the Royal Aquarium, Westminster (All in London, England). After touring Europe and the U.S., Ajeeb was destroyed in a fire on Coney Island on March 15, 1929.

THE MISSING HALF POINT — A NEAR MISS FOR NONA

Nona Gaprindaschwili, Women's World Champion, nearly won the Dortmund, Germany, International, tying for second place with Raymond Keene of England with 7½ points. She missed by half a point in tying for first place with Ulf Andersson, Sweden, who scored eight points out of 11. In their individual game, which she won, it came to the following position after Black's (Andesson's) 33rd move.

WHITE: King on QN3, Knight on Q5, Bishop on K3, Pawns on QR5, QN4, QB4, KN2 and KR2 (9 pieces).

BLACK: King on QB3, Knight on KB1; Bishop on Q3; Pawns on QR3, QN4, K5, KB4, KN3 and KR2 (9 pieces).

WHITE (Nona) played 34. PxPch and Andersson grabbed the Knight on Q5 (KxN). With 34. KxP, he had nothing to fear. There now followed: 35. PxP, N-K3; 36. P-R7, N-B2; 37. P-N5 and Black resigned, as after 37. N-R1, there follows 38. P-R6, K-B3; 39. P-R6.

The solution to the problem above is: 1. R-QR3, K-Q6; 2. Q-QB2 mate; or 1. K-K4; 2. Q-Q5 mate; or 1. P-K4; 2. Q-B3 mate, etc.

FOOD PRICES DROPPED - AIB

OTTAWA (CP) — Lower prices for beef and for most fruits and vegetables contributed to a significant over-all decline in food prices across the country in the four weeks to Sept. 15, the Anti-Inflation Board said Friday.

Prices fell about 1.7 per cent in the month.

However, the board's regular survey of prices, gathered in about 60 supermarkets in 12 cities, found food prices still are about 14.6 per cent above levels of a year ago.

Beef prices declined by 4.2 per cent in the four months after wholesale and live cattle prices fell. But the Anti-Inflation Board warns it does not expect this trend to continue. Beef in the supermarket now costs about 36.8 per cent more than a year ago.

Pork prices went up about 2.9 per cent in the month because of higher producer prices and the meat now costs consumers about 11.7 per cent more than last year.

Similarly, prices for poultry increased by 1.8 per cent in the four weeks to a level 21.7 per cent higher than last year. The board notes demand for chicken is rising as prices for red meats increase.

Fish prices were stable and are about 11.7 per cent more than last year. Salmon catches are running below last year's level but ahead of the average for the past five years. The worst of the increases for tuna, which occurred because of the devaluation of the dollar, seem to be over, the board says.

Fresh fruit prices fell by 12.2 per cent in the past month, mainly because of a 25 per cent decline in apple prices. It still costs consumers about 25.9 per cent more than last year for fresh fruit.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological forecast for Sunday, September 24
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Promises come easy and others tend to pass them around to you. Be discriminating. Analyze, piece together bits of information. You can come up with complete story. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. You get one valid offer, five "nibbles" which are not serious.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Home, relatives, serious talks concerning security are on agenda. Libra, Aries — and another Taurus — are part of scenario. Be diplomatic, but have clear understanding about expenditures, costs, interest on loans. Special messenger could be featured.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message — check budget. Be aware of valuables, where they are placed, safety box rentals. Someone introduces element of deception. Don't be caught off guard. Look behind scenes, be alert to hidden motives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make this a power-play day. Moon is in your sign, your number is 8 — your judgment is sound, your intuition is honed to razor-sharpness. Capricorn persons grants vote of confidence and it could open door to progress.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent on what occurs "in secret." Seclusion may be necessary. Being alone is not same as being lonely. Your desires are fulfilled — love ceases to be a stranger. Wear bright colors, show that you are alive-and-kicking and glad of it!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Study Leo message — what had been "missing" is located. You feel better, more useful — you imprint style and have plenty to say concerning policy. Highlight originality, independence, pioneering endeavors. You meet someone who could aid in making some dreams become realities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Action comes from the top; supervisor or superior aids you. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius figure in scenario. You get valid impressions and should act on them. Learning process is stimulated. Teach, share, be generous — you'll be well repaid.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Diversity — don't put all eggs in one basket. You win if adaptable. You lose if rigid. The choice is your own. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently. Emphasis on publication, communication, long-distance calls, travel, educational projects.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): What seemed obscure or buried becomes available. Be up-to-date on passport, birth certificate, lease, post office box, rent and the like. Aquarius, Scorpio, Leo figure prominently. One close to you reveals financial plan.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent on agreements, marital status, public relations, confronting ideas which are opposite your own. Take time to analyze, to exchange — and to listen. Defer to partner or mate. Gather data. Prepare, file, bring priorities into focus.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Moderate pace spells success. Know it and act accordingly. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons — and the number 6 — figure prominently. Employment, nutrition, associates who share your interests — these are highlighted. Make gesture of reconciliation to family member.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Member of opposite sex runs "true to form." Accent on excitement, speculation, variety, quick changes. Aura, of mystery and glamour is present. Be discreet. Don't expect too much from one who whispers, insinuates and lives on intrigue.

IF SEPTEMBER 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have fine voice, could teach, act and you also are a diplomat. You are a psychologist, musical, dramatic, artistic, sensitive and you have to watch your "sweet tooth." Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. You will make significant changes in October — and, if single, could fall in love. If married, you rediscover mate — and it will be good.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, September 25
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Home, domestic conditions, basic costs, living expenses figure prominently. Taurus, Libra figure prominently. A gentle, artistic person could come into your life. Be diplomatic — win rather than force your way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You might take short trip in connection with a relative. Pisces, Cancer persons could play key roles. Define meanings, review terms, be positive of quotes. No person can really fool you, but unless careful you do a good job of it yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Organize activities — Your position is strong. Person in authority will back you. Know it and act accordingly. Accent on personal possessions, valuables. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure in scenario. Financial picture is brighter than might be immediately apparent.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take initiative, make new starts, contacts, get rid of burden not rightly your own in first place. Aries, Libra, Leo persons figure in scenario. Welcome chance to express yourself in original way. Make personal appearances.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Delay is temporary. You're not defeated. You're on brink of discovery. Fears, doubts, confinement, loneliness will soon be on the run. Another Leo, an Aquarian and a Cancer play important roles. Handicap may prove a blessing in disguise.

VIGRO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Study Leo message. Emotional involvement should inspire, not cause you to be sad. Desire is fulfilled if you steer clear of petty complaints, office politics. Aquarian figures prominently. A debonair friend will aid you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You could win popularity contest — promotion might be on agenda. Gemini, Sagittarius figure in scenario. Goal is within reach. Key is to know it and act as if aware of it. Highlight versatility and humor. What seemed a defeat boomerangs in your favor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent philosophy, more knowledge, language, communication. There is an "escape hatch" and you'll locate it. Aquarius, Taurus, Leo persons figure in scenario. You grow, you perceive, analyze and gain in stature. Live up to . . ."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stress change, reading, writing, putting information to use. Look beneath surface indications. Partner or mate has creative plan; if nurtured, it could pay dividends. Yes, Gemini is in picture. Member of opposite sex both loves and resents you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent on easy-going approach — do more listening than asserting. Partnership, binding legal agreement, marriage could be highlighted. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently. You gain a great advantage and, in not-too-distant future, it will reflect in your bank account.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Maintain even pace and a low profile, Pisces, Virgo figures prominently. Emphasis is on correcting past mistakes, getting job done and refusing to believe rumors. A "moody" individual wants to cry on your shoulder. Know when enough is enough.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Involvement, investment, time and money are featured in intensified manner. Accent creativity, your own impressions and creations. You'll have responsibility of setting scene and pace, of leadership. You'll gain catcalls and plaudits. You'll learn who is true, who false — and, maybe, what you can do about it.

IF SEPTEMBER 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are introspective, artistic, sentimental and temperamental. December will be one of your most important months of 1978. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius persons play key roles in your life. You are serious about aiding "disturbed" or handicapped individuals. Your sense of justice is very real; you are spiritual, sensitive and psychic. You can make money with Scorpio and fall in love with Aquarius persons.

Tanned Students on Patrol

GIMLI, Man. (CP) — The Canadian Coast Guard in this resort town on Lake Winnipeg works out of a motel room and every September the crew members roll up their charts and return to school.

The station, which first went into operation three years ago, is manned by university students working on the lake from the Victoria Day weekend in two three-member crews.

"The public tends to be a little jealous," said crew member Jane Lescerbo. "There is always a stigma that 'those tanned bodies do nothing'."

But while the sight of deeply-tanned bodies in the blue coast guard uniforms might raise a few eyebrows so far from the sea, the crews feel they provide an important service for the tourists who flock to the area 100 kilometres north of Winnipeg during the summer.

"This lake is no joke," said Ms. Loscerbo. "It has character." The lake, third-largest in Canada, has a reputation for its ability to change quickly from placid calm to sea-like gale.

Coxswain Derek Ferguson, a mechanical engineering student, described the weather on the lake as the single biggest hazard to boaters.

"Boaters should check the forecast before going out on the lake and know enough to head for shore when conditions change and strong winds come up."

Most of the emergency calls come from the popular cottage area between Winnipeg Beach and Gimli, although the crews are in charge of about 518 square kilometres between Hecla Island and the mouth of the Red River.

They can have their boat in the water within five minutes of receiving a call. The crews are on 24-hour alert and patrol their area on eight-hour shifts in their specially-designed boat, which is "almost impossible to sink."

While two members of a crew patrol, the third stays in the radio-equipped truck to monitor the boat's position.

The crews — Searle, Ferguson, Loscerbo, Joann Johnson, Brent Hemington and Graig Campbell — had been out nine times by mid-July to rescue boaters.

Those who need assistance, the crews said, often are victims of their own carelessness and part of their job involves issuing warnings to boaters who ignore safety regulations.

They are trained as lifeguards as well as in first aid and search-and-rescue techniques.

The two coxswains, who coordinate activities, have studied navigation and inshore rescue operations at Transport Canada's coast guard base in Trenton, Ont.

BACK-TO-WORK ORDER NEXT: ANDRAS

Posties Given Ultimatum

OTTAWA (CP) — The government warned leaders of the striking letter carriers union today to accept the contract proposal now on the bargaining table or face a legislated settlement by Parliament.

Treasury Board President Robert Andras told a news conference the government has no more money to offer and that cabinet is monitoring the effects of the rotating strikes on a day-to-day basis.

"There is no more money available for a settlement," Andras said. "The government is absolutely determined."

However, he said the 19,000-member Letter Carriers Union of Canada (LCUC) has not been given a deadline for settlement after which Parliament would be recalled.

Legislation would require an early recall of Parliament, now scheduled to return Oct. 10.

The joint news conference was held by Andras, who controls the government's pursestrings, and Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne, to explain the government's restraint policy as the rotating strikes continued for the second day.

Union spokesman said 25 of 285 locals across the country now are off the job.

Both sides have agreed to a basic six-per-cent salary increase over an 18-month contract but disagree on the amount of a cost-of-living formula.

The union says it is entitled to an additional 19 cents an hour that was negotiated in the last contract but was later rolled back by the anti-inflation board. The contract expired June 30.

The government says the additional 19 cents exceeds its policy of making public service settlements comparable to those in the private sector.

The union has twice rejected the government's proposal to implement an interim settlement based on the last offer while the entire matter goes to binding arbitration.

"We want to make it absolutely clear that we have no more money," Andras said. "Clearly, this a a futile work stoppage."

Andras refused to be specific about how long the cabinet was prepared to allow the strikes to continue before taking action.

"No decision has been made yet but we're monitoring the situation and obviously we can't allow it to go on for any length of time," he said.

Union President Robert McGarry says the letter carriers are willing to bargain but that there is no point in further talks unless the government changes its offer.

"All we are looking for is that someone sit down to negotiate with us and at least show some movement at the table," he said in an interview after the news conference.

Cook's Impulsive Look Saves Tide-Trapped Pair

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

It was just after lunch when Rick Cooper, a cook for a Parks Canada crew working on the West Coast Trail, rose from a nap in a bunkhouse at Camper Bay 15 miles from Port Renfrew.

He walked a few steps from the bunkhouse, looked at rain-swollen Camper Creek and down towards the mouth 200 yards away.

That impulse to take some air saved the lives Thursday of two young women hikers who had become stranded on a rock and were within minutes of being swept out to sea by the rising tide.

Sydney Johnsen, 22, an X-ray technician, and Jill Kieffer, 23, a nurse, both from Sechelt, said it was the "will of God" that saved them.

Then on Friday, an hour before the still-shaken women were flown out by helicopter, they witnessed another near-tragedy . . . a hiker crossing Camper Creek was swept downstream and nearly drowned in the fast-moving water.

Brodie Harrington of Vancouver was crossing the creek with Ron Adams when he sank up to his armpits and was swept downstream. In desperation he grabbed a branch and pulled himself ashore . . . only 300 feet from the sea.

To Pacific Rim National Park superintendent Frank Camp a lot can be learned from the two incidents.

He said they show what can happen if people travel off the trail in bad weather, or attempt to cross swollen creeks where bridges have not been installed.

"They should stay put until the weather improves," he said.

For the women, both experienced hikers, all was beauty and joy along the trail until the weather suddenly deteriorated as they approached the south end.

They decided to leave the designated trail and walk to Camper Bay along sandstone shelves by the seaside —about 12 miles — a safe enough route if the tide is low but hazardous when high.

They weren't making good progress so they decided to walk along the bed of a small creek and rejoin the trail. But the salal was so thick, they were forced to retrace their steps.

"It got dark and it was raining," said Johnsen. "We decided to pitch our tent on a shelf, the sea only a few feet away. There was no other place. We soon found out we were in a pool of water. We just lay in our sodden sleeping bags. The next morning we rung them out like towels."

BIKER PROTEST A REAL SMASH

About 5,000 riders had taken part in the Friday night demonstration, gathering in Bastille Square in eastern Paris and then roaring for three hours up and down the Champs Elysees and other city thoroughfares.

The accident occurred on the city's ring beltway after the protest broke up and several hundred motorcyclists headed for the eastern suburbs. The cause of the pile-up is not immediately determined.

The demonstrators demanded that authorities take motorcycle safety into account in road planning and protested attacks on large-engined bikes by Road Safety Directer Christian Gerondeau following the deaths of five riders attending a motorcycle race last week.

Gerondeau suggested riders should have special permits to ride motorcycles with engines larger than 450 cubic centimetres.

"People who buy Ferraris don't need special permits," said demonstrator Paul Laurent, 22. "Why should a man who buys a 450cc bike be obliged to get one?"

United Way Takes Aim At $926,000

The United Way campaign this year hopes to hit the $926,500 mark.

Dave Cutler, place kicker for the Edmonton Eskimos, and Bob Mussett, this year's campaign chairman will start the drive by kicking off a giant wather balloon decorated with the United Way flag.

Also in attendence will be represenatives from all 23 member agencies and the campaign cabinet.

Last year, the campaign achieved its goal and is confident this year's target, a 9 per cent increase over 1977, will also be met.

This year 10 executives on loan from Victoria businesses will be working full time in a bid to make sure the drive reaches its goal.

United Way is made up of volunteers who collect and then distribute money to local charitable institutions. More than 90 per cent of each dollar is paid out to member agencies.

In Victoria last year, $792,147 was distributed among member agencies and $51,674 used for year-round bookkeeping, agency relations and administration.

Last year, local contributions obtained 13,179 pints of blood for the Red Cross, provided services to handicapped children, help senior citizens and the blind, delivered hot meals to the sick and made 3,000 physical and occupational therapy treatments available to multiple schlerosis sufferers.

United Way conducts only one annual campaign in the Greater Victoria area, replacing what would be 23 annual drives for funds if each member agency had to do it alone.

In return for a single donation on behalf of all its member, the United Way pledges to business concerns and individuals that no other solicitation will be made for operating funds by any of the member agencies.

Hero's Welcome For Sadat

CAIRO (AP) — President Anwar Sadat, carrying a promise of peace from the Camp David summit, returned to Egypt today to a tumultuous welcome hailing him as "the hero of peace."

Thousands of his countrymen, including the entire cabinet and all 360 members of parliament, greeted Sadat at Cairo airport in a reception organized by his National Democratic party.

Hundreds of thousands of others were expected to welcome Sadat later as he rode into the city itself.

Royal a 'Real Mess', Symphony Books UVic

Renovations to the Royal Theatre will not be finished in time for the opening concert of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra Oct. 1 — and the delay could eventually cost the municipally-owned building its main tenant.

Symphony personnel officer E.T. Hemingway said today the orchestra cheered when it was informed it would have to perform in University of Victoria's new concert hall instead.

"We (the symphony officers) were upset but the orchestra was happy. The acoustics are much superior in the university's new concert hall. I think the orchestra would prefer to play there on a permanent basis."

Hemingway said he and symphony president Jean Hunter were upset mainly because they were not informed about the delay at the Royal Theatre.

"I learned quite by accident. I met someone who was working on the project and he suggested Mrs. Hunter and I go down and take a look. It was a real mess."

(Mrs. Hunter said that when she walked into the Royal Theatre and saw the state of the stage and dressing rooms, "I just about had cardiac arrest.")

The symphony officials quickly arranged to switch the concert to UVic. The program, featuring four arias by Anna Moffo, will be held at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 1, and at 8 p.m. Monday, Oct. 2, at the new concert hall.

But the UVic hall might not be available for the second concert series, scheduled Oct. 15 and Oct. 16.

University auditorium manager David Titterton said the auditorium is already quite heavily booked for October and any other concerts for which the Royal is not available will have to be shifted to other days of the week from the traditional Sunday-Monday.

The Royal will not be available until Oct. 20.

Hemingway said symphony officials were upset mainly because they hadn't been warned about the trouble at the Royal and because of problems in making the switch to UVic.

"Many members have sat in a certain place for years and now we have to try to get

JABOUR WINS COURT ROUND

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal has unanimously upheld a B.C. Supreme Court order stopping the the B.C. Law Society from disciplining a North Vancouver lawyer for advertising.

The three appeal court judges ruled Friday that the case of lawyer Donald Jabour was of a unique and special nature and ordered the continuation of an injunction granted in May by Justice R. P. Anderson.

Jabour was found guilty by a special law society committee of conduct unbecoming a member of the law profession after he violated society rules and advertised a legal clinic he opened in North Vancouver last January.

The committee cited him for misconduct and recommended he be suspended for six months.

Jabour sued the society for damages, claiming the advertising ban was a breach of the Combines Investigation Act.

Justice Anderson set trial for Jabour's damage action against the society for November. Jabour has agreed not to advertise pending his court action.

Soccer Fan Killed

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — A soccer fan was killed today as violence flared before an English League First Division match between Birmingham City and Chelsea.

The man, who was not named by police, died when pushed underneath a double decker bus.

The dead man was believed to be a Chelsea supporter.

At another match, between Third Division teams Brentford and Gillingham, fans fought a pitched battle on the terraces as police battled to keep them under control.

SIN Abuse Appals Rights Boss

OTTAWA (CP) — Human Rights Commissioner Gordon Fairweather says Parliament will be asked to deal with alleged misuse of social insurance numbers.

Fairweather, speaking today in an interview taped for Standard Broadcast News, said information received by government for one purpose should not be used for another.

"But I tell you that I am appalled, and the Canadian Human Rights Commission is appalled if other departments of governments can hook into a computer which is programmed just on the social insurance number."

He said he has no objection to the use of the social insurance number for employment purposes or income tax purposes.

But, Fairweather added, his employment record should not be accessible to other government departments.

"So things that have nothing whatsoever to do with my income tax are splashed all over," Fariweather added.

He said the commission expects to discuss the issue of alleged social insurance number misuse with Parliament.

"We strongly condemn it, but we have to do more than that. We have to ask Parliament to deal with it."

RCMP officials earlier this summer testified before a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing that the social insurance number has developed into an identification card.

Following testimony about the relationship between the RCMP and the unemployment insurance commission, RCMP access to commission files were cut until the royal commission decides on the issue.

A senior RCMP official said the RCMP is going to challenge the unemployment insurance commission's view - based on justice department's opinion-that giving confidential data to police is illegal.

Arab Hawks Unite to Block Peace

Times News Services

Arab hawks today announced how they plan to bring President Anwar Sadat of Egypt to his knees and undermine accords on peace in the Middle East signed at Camp David, Md., last Sunday.

Their plan of action was drawn up in three days of discussions in Damascus by the leaders of the Front for Steadfastness and Confrontation. It groups Syria, Algeria, South Yemen, Lybia and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO).

Informed sources said Friday night the anti-Egyptian front has agreed on the formation of a joint political and military command for co-ordinated moves against Israel and Egypt after the Camp David accords worked out by U.S. President Carter, Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

The agreements are regarded by the front as a sellout of the Arabs and a total Egyptian surrender to U.S. and Israeli dictates.

The sources said a final document of the Damascus meeting also would include provisions for closer ties with the Soviet Union and increased military and economic support for Syria and the PLO, the nucleus of the front.

The resolutions are certain to make the mission of U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance in Damascus more difficult. Vance is scheduled to arrive in Damascus on Sunday after a 24-hour postponement at Syria's request.

In Amman today, King Hussein of Jordan warned of "very serious repercussions" if Egypt and Israel negotiate a separate treaty and said only substantial changes in the Camp David accord could persuade him to join the peace moves.

The king unleashed his sharpest criticism yet of Sadat but left open a possibility he might join the peace efforts without a public or written commitment by Israel to meet all Arab demands.

Israeli settlers in northern Sinai today blocked a road leading to their village in protest against the Camp David agreements that would probably lead to their eviction from the area.

Israel Radio said the settlers were allowing military vehicles through but civilians touring the area during the Sabbath day of rest were being turned back.

GET OUT, MAIR TELLS OTTAWA

"It's about time the federal government let the provinces and the regions do those things that they do best, and that particularly relates to the consumer field," the minister said Friday.

As things now stand, he said, the big loser is the consumer.

Mair said Ottawa insists on controlling the market place and then fails to enforce its own regulations.

No Night Shutdown Of Pat Bay Tower

Transport Minister Otto Lang has abandoned plans to close the Patricia Bay airport control tower during slack hours.

The proposal, which would have taken effect in 1979, was to get along without a traffic control officer from midnight to 7 a.m.

Similar cutbacks were ordered for airports at Dorval, Ottawa, Edmonton, Halifax, Moncton and St. John's.

Stephen Rybak, a spokesman for the transport ministry, said Lang has decided that Victoria will retain its overnight traffic control officer. The cutback at the six other airports is also under review, he said.

The plan had been criticized by Esquimalt-Saanich MP Don Munro who said there must be someone on duty in case of a landing emergency even in light traffic periods.

Without a traffic control officer, a pilot would be able to communicate only with a radio officer who could supply general information about ground conditions but could give no assistance with landing procedures.

Lang had expected to save $1 million per year by closing the control towers overnight at the seven airports.

He is continuing a study of ways to save money and may reduce emergency service crews at Sault Ste. Marie, Regina, Goose Bay, Yellowknife and Penticton.

Christians Blasted

BEIRUT (AP) — Syrian tanks, rockets and machine-guns blasted Christian militia positions in Beirut today and the militiamen retaliated with heavy machine-gun bursts. Police said six Lebanese were killed and 37 wounded.

Boys Find Baby

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Two boys returning home from school on Thursday investigated what they thought was the cry of a kitten and found an abandoned two-day-old baby beneath a sheet on the front porch of an empty house.

Evelyn Pastro, mother of Remo Sandro Pastro, 10, one of the boys who found the baby, said the boys wrapped the baby in the sheet and took him to her house.

Mrs. Pastro said she warmed up and diapered the baby.

"Once I'd warmed him up he stopped crying," she said.

Socred Doorstep Vote Bid?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett kept provincial election speculation alive in British Columbia Friday by saying the Social Credit party would conduct a door-to-door campaign to "listen to the people."

Bennett didn't say if the Doorstep '78 Campaign would be a party public-relations program or part of an election fight.

Bennett arrived here from Victoria Friday to attend a closed meeting with about 150 party constituency officials from across B.C. for a seminar on riding organization. There was no party comment later on what was discussed.

Meanwhile, the provincial human resources ministry was sending welfare recipients a new pamphlet that mentions the Social Credit party's reduction in sales tax to five from seven per cent.

NEW METHOD ENDS SMOKING FOR LIFE

RESEARCHED AT U.B.C.

Recently published results of research at U.B.C. report on a new, simple, pleasant way to end smoking permanently. Proven effective for even heavy smokers, smoking can be ended easily in just 24 hours without drugs, discomfort or weight gain. The new method now available in Victoria is called R.E.S.T. (Reduced Environmental Stimulation Technique). Private, personalized and professionally supervised, it can be used in your own home. 75% to 95% of the smokers who tried R.E.S.T. quit successfully. If you want to stop smoking, or if your doctor has told you to stop, phone now for free information or an appointment. Results are guaranteed.

Smokers who want to stop smoking for life can — Phone toll free, through Operator, Zenith 2280, Personal Improvement Centre, Monday to Friday, 8:30 to 5:00. P.I.C. 1177 W. Hastings.
